"Can you tell me about the earth? asked the Worried-Looking Man.

"I can tell you a few things about the earth, replied the professor. "What do you want to know?"

"Well, does it wobble?"

"You mean to ask if it oscillates upon its axis?"

"Yes, I guess so. Does it wobble back and forth and the equator run after the north pole and the north pole dodge away from the equator? Is the pole and the equator skedaddling round over the surface of the earth all the time, so ye can't put your hand on neither one of

If it were only as easy a matter to cure a cold as it is to catch one, it is not at all likely that enough money would shower into the coffers of the him to live in a gilded palace by the sea in summer and luxuriate in a songful orangery during the winter season. And if it were so easy to cure a cold, every other man you meet would not be telling you of the never-failing remetics.

The visitor came into the office of a country paper in a distillery district of Kentucky with a notice in his hand.

"I want to put an advertisement in the asked, as she looked up at him. "Plagued if I know," he reputed after a moment's thought.

"Get the dictionary and see, won't you, please?" she said, nibbling on her pen.

"Some fellow in Missouri sends it to me. He wants to exchange a farm he owns out here for whiskey."

"Well, of course," sighed the editor, "Why, yes, you can," she insisted. "It's in every dictionary."

"Well, of course," sighed the editor, "Why, yes, you can," she insisted. "It's in every dictionary."

"Well, by hokey, my dear," he responded the editor, "Why, yes, you can," she insisted. "It's in every dictionary."

"Well, by hokey, my dear," he responded the editor, "Green in the book. After five minutes' search he appealed to her. "I can't find it," he said, helplessly. "Why, yes, you can," she insisted. "It isn't in this one. I've looked clean through the N's and it isn't there." HOW HERR PALETTE MADE A FOOL OF HIS be telling you of the never-failing remedy that cured his, and advising you to purchase a bottle at once if you would be restored to your normal condition and again be in the enjoyment of a firstrate appetite.

About five minutes after I emerged from the slush into which I had been projected on the fly by an unkind, scowling fate, I began to wheeze like a second-hand concerting with chafed bronchial tubes until my respirations in sound were not unlike those of musin being frantically torn by a dry-goods clerk at the close of a busy day. The cold was not painful, except when people looked at me in the cars, as if they thought from the noise that the wheels in my head were sorely in need of oiling.

cold was not paintul, except when people looked at me in the cars, as if they thought from the noise that the wheels in my head were sorely in need of oiling.

I began on whiskey and quinine. I don't know how much I consumed, but I do know that for over a week I felt like a multi-millionaire and imagined that I owned all the sky-scraping edifices which loomed up in my rosy vision. I never before knew how much solid happiness lay within the easy reach of all. Still my cold grew worse, but I was so happy that I didn't notice it. I simply bought another bottle and took it hot and cold, but it would not cure anything but blues. I was advised by one man to use mustard plasters, but these I declined, because the element of pleasure was lacking. To be consumed by a mustard plaster, and not cured, was something too horrible to contemplate. Mustard is all right for the stomach when taken on a sandwich, but pasting it on the stomach like a circus poster does not make one feel like a lotus eater floating on a gilded cloud. Another man advised a Turkish bath—a remedy which I tried at once. Lying down on the marble slab, I imagined I was being borne through groves of olive and citron on the back of a lazy camel, while languid scents and dreamy melodies filled the air like a gentle benison. The lush syrups of the East made me drowsy and lulled me to sweet forgetfulness of outstanding accounts until I walked in the glamor of an Arabian night. I was massaged with turpentine and alcohol till I felt as supple as a greybound and I dreamed on softest lounges till life was paradise. But still the cold held on with the iron grip of a corporation. And so I shifted from the bottle, and frequently I combined the two, but it was all in vain. The transports of wealth and happiness which were mine were devouring the contents of my pocketbook, even as a hot-air furnace devours coal, and I felt that I must, perforce, haul in my financial horns.

Alas! we never take the trouble to hip a cold in the bud, but prefer to let it go away itself, l

(From the Boston Transcript.) It may be expected that when the women get their rights they will become the head of the family and carry the pocket-book. Then mere will boor man be? Under the present order the wife can help herself to the loose change in the husband's pockets, and so the two live on together in peace and tranquility. But how is the husband ever to find the wife's bocket? Men should reflect upon this before giving the ballot to the women.

They looked like gentlemen of leisure until ordered to undress, when it became apparent, from their woolen shirts, with "fake" collars and cuffs, that they were prepared for a "job" and were undoubtedly cracks in their business.

The information upon which the arrest was made reached Chief Desmond about 0 o'clock last night through one of the attaches of the Lindell Hotel. The informant stated that there were at least four suspicious characters in the house and Garnett, allas Graham, was mentioned as the escort of the gang. The names furnished the police were J. H. While Wesley and Murray were being taken care of by these officers, Detectives McGrath and Kelleher walked up to Barnett, in the hotel saloon, and placed him in custody. They had been told he was a desperate man and the first thing they did was to search him for a weapon. Down between the waist-band of his trousers and his stomach they found a Nuded 4c-caliber Colt's revolver, which they confiscated.

The close searching given the trio at the Four Courts revealed nothing but a few letters and telegrams, which were found in the possession of Barnett. One telegram showed that a woman, who he claims is his wife, and whose name is Lida, intended to leave Marshall, Tex., Sunday night. An advertising circular of I. Harris' clothing store, $15 Washington avenue, which had been mailed to Barnett under the name of Graham, was also found. The other prisoners had no letters or papers of any kind in their pockets.

Murray when questioned, said that he was a stone mason and that his home was San Francisco, Cal., where his father, now dead, had run a stone yard. He claims to have arrived here only two days ago and stated that he came here from Texas. From what place he would not say. He denied having any room or having registered at the hotel. He said he had no buggare and that he had been in a disreputable house since his arrivad here about 5 p. m. last evening. ism that the public placed over the heads of the supposed intrepld men and women who travel about with shows of wild animals, entering the cages and handling the ani-mals as ordinary cats and dogs, has van-ished before the light of an exposure which Mr. James A. Bailey, proprietor of the Barnum Show and all the other circuess, made at Bridgeport to-day. Under the guidance of "Tody" Hamilton, a man famed throughout the country, a party of bloodhounds. In the center of the cage was a long table, spread on which was a goodly assortment of food and drink William Winter, the chief animal trainer, with a few assistants garbed as waiters, stood around the table. "Gentlemen," said Mr. Hamilton, "Mr. Winter has invited us to lunch with him and his pets."

"What, in there,?" asked some one. "Certainly, come right in," said he, throwing open the cage door.

The whole thing was such a surprise, and was done so quickly that before the visitors had time to get nervous they found themselves seated around the table. For the first few minutes there was not much merriment. To ask for "a little more of that rare beef" while one had one eye on the beef and the other on a lion that was almost within arm's-reach, was a trific embarrassing. The wild beasts behaved with such propriety, except that they would persist in growling, perhaps as a welcome that the nervousness soon gave way. "Tody" Hamilton destroyed the last semblance of gravity in the situation by decorating a panther with the contents of a well-aimed oyster patty, much to the delight of the laughing hyena on the next pedestal. This emboldened one guest to regale the big bear with a bottle of beer, while another tossed the wings of a chicken into the mouth of a lion. The circus will be full of novelties when it arrives.

BOONE, Io., March S.—A desperate battle between the city police and a gang of twenty tramps took place here at 2 o'clock this morning. The gang have infested the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad yards at the edge of town all winter. At Chase Station the trainmen were all driven from the tops of the cars, and it was expected that an attack would be made on the engine. But after the train they began quarreling among themselves, and during one of their fights a man was thrown from the train and it is supposed in the fall was injured, if not killed outright.

Conductor Riley telegraphed to this city for help, and when the train reached the west yard here there were about fifty pollomen in waiting. As soon as the train was brought to a stop the tramps jumped from the cars and started to run across the fields. The heavy fog prevented the officers from capturing many of the men, but after a running fight in which several shots were fired, the police succeeded in securing eleven of the gang. When the tramps were cornered they showed fight, and only surrendered at the point of revolvers.

This morning the prisoners were given a hearing and were given jail sentences.

TWO DEAD CHILDREN. The Double Murder Committed by a Mother in Texas.

Special to The Post-Dispetch.

PARIS, Tex., March 9.—A shocking double child murder was committed three miles southwest of Roxton, a small town fifteen miles southwest of here on the Santa Fe Railroad, this morning. Last night about 9 o'clock Mrs. Mollie Caruthers, the wife of William Caruthers, a respectable well-to-do farmer, went up to her room and gave her three children large quantities of morphine. About 4 o'clock her husband, who was sleeping in another room, heard heavy breathing in the children's apartments, and on going there found two of tha children in a heavy stupor from which he was unable to arouse them. Mrs. Caruthers said that she had given them some chill tonic. Physicians were summoned, but could do nothing for the two youngest, one ill and the other 4 years of age, and at 9 o'clock both were dead. The oldest, 2 girl, of 14, recovered, and is now out of danger. An investigation was begun and in a few hours Mrs. Caruthers admitted that she had given the children morphine for the purpose of Deputy Sheriff Vost, who handles the gavel in Judge Filteraft's division of the Circuit Court, yesterday underwent an experience which almost broke his heart and made him feel like throwing up his job and resuming his old place as chief clerk on the steamer Benton, in the Missouri River trade, which position he had held for many years. What almost occasioned his discomfiture was an order made by Judge Filteraft in the divorce case of Marie M. Link v. William F. Link, directing Mrs. Link to turn over to her husband a lo-year-old son of the parties mamed, Willie, alleged to have been abducted by Mrs. Link after the commencement of the divorce suit. Mr. Link, who is at present cashier in Collector Ziegenhein's effice, claimed that the little one was in his possession who will be suit began, and there are men and and school when the male and alice retained possible of the man and the suit began, and there are man and so had one of him, having refused to give him up. The mother denied that she had abducted the boy, and stated that he came to her voluntarily, and was being well cared for at the home of her parents.

The Judge heard the evidence, and took the matter under advisement. Later, he held that, inasmuch as the father was the legal custodian of his children, no harm would result if little Willie was restored to him, to remain with him until the final disposition of the divorce suft, and he made an order accordingly.

"This is a bad job. I would much rather some one else would do it," suggested Mr. Vogt to Mr. Link But the latter was incorrable. He wanted that boy, and the court's order must be Carried out. The most of the court's order must be Carried out. The most of the court did not permanently dispose of the child to only gave the boy to Mr. Link was near by, and that Mr. Link was near by, and that Mrs. Link was leaf the would

AIR LINE RECEIVERSHIP.

Preparing a Reply to the Charges Filed at Indianapolis.

E. O. Hopkins, general manager of the Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis Con-solidated Railway, accompanied by Major solidated Railway, accompanied by Major S. H. Wilson, is in the city to arrange an answer to a petition presented to the United States Court at Indianapolis March 7, praying for the removal of the receiver of that road, the charges being mismanagement and gross shortcomings. The title of the case is: "Theodore G. Meier, trustee, and the Germania Safety Vault and Trust Co., for the removal of receivers."

Mr. Theodore G. Meier, whose office is in the Bank of Commerce Building, said that the use of his name was unauthorized. He said that he was the trustee of three mortgages of the Illinois and St. Louis Railway, and Coal Co., which company was absorbed by the L., E. & St. L. C. Ry. Co. about four and one-haif years ago. Certain Louisville persons, he said, were attempting to remove the receivers and the only question he was interested in was as to whether he should be made a party to the suit. His attorney, Chas. Nagel, said "Mr. Meier had information that the receivers were about to apply for an order to raise $500,000 to $1,000.600 on receivers certificates, which would have the preference over any of the mortgages. Having had no actual notice of this application, he felt called upon to authorize his objection to that order. The order was actually issued for $200,000 and that for the present is disposed of. The proposed removal of the receivers is an entirely independent matter as to which Mr. Meier has at no time taken position. Of course the question for him to consider is whether or not his interest under the senior mortgage is such as to require his taking any action." St. Louis parties interested in the system say the yare well pleased with the management of the present receivers.

SCHEME TO SAVE SURETIES.

The Defaulter's Liabilities Paid With Money Stolen From the State Funds.

PIERRE, S. D., March 9.-The legislative ion made its report just before adjourn report is now made public for the first time. before it that it is shown conspiracy existe gitive ex-Treasurer and the the defaulter to "hold up" the State and compel a settle-ment. It says: "We do not find that there prior to the time when it became apparent to John T. McChesney of New York, one of the bondsmen, that Taylor would not be able to make his settlement with the State. But we do find evidence strongly teuding to show that, in the latter part of December, 1894, and after McChesney discovered that Taylor could not raise enough money to make his settlement, McChesney, together with Taylor, D. K. Tenney and C. H. Wells and C. T. McCoy, acting as agent at Pierre. S. D., entered into a scheme to gather up Taylor could not raise enough money to make his settlement, McChesney, together with Taylor, D. K. Tenney and C. H. Wells and C. T. McCoy, acting as agent at Pierre. S. D., entered into a scheme to gather up all the funds held by Taylor, amounting to ever $200,000, and all the real and personal property owned by Taylor wherever located and place the same beyond the reach of the State to agree not to prosecute Taylor criminally, or, in other words, to compound a felony on condition that property and money to the amount of $100,000 should be delivered up and paid over to the State, thus relieving the sureties by paying their liabilities with the funds stolen from the State. The evidence shows that they have attempted to carry out the scheme with intent to defraud the State."

Tenney and Wells are the Chicago lawyers of Taylor and McChesney, one of his bondsmen of New York. The committee finds that the total amount stolen by Taylor was $344,070.10. As to where the money went, the evidence shows among other things, "that he loaned ex-Gov. Mellete moneys amounting to $29,000; that he loaned Judge Kellam $4,000, and purchased a negotiable note for $5,000, given by United States Senator Pettigrew, which was repaid to C. T. McCoy, Taylor's agent, on or about the 7th of January, 1895.

"We further find that during the month of December last he transferred from banks in the State where he deposited public funds about $200,000 to himself and for his benefit to New York and Chicago; that he appropriated to his own use prior to December last $15,800.

"The evidence shows no collusion on the part of any State officer with defaulting Treasurer. There is, however, testimony showing gross negligence, to say the least, on the part of thomas H. Ruth, ex-commissioner of school and public lands."

The report states that action to recover has been begun in thirty different counties and that service has been served on all the defendants in the case that suits have also been instituted against McChesney in New York and Others to say t

In the Brokers' Favor.

CHICAGO. III., March 9.—Judge Adams to-day decided the case of Mulford & Mackenzie, ticket brokers, against the Chicago & Alton Railroad, finding the issue for the plaintiffs and fixing their damages at $10,884. Mulford & Mackenzie bought of the Alton road in 1880 $50,000 worth of tickets at 50 cents on the dollar, the tickets being also good over the Lake Erie & Western. The Lake Erie & Western, which had gone filto the hands of a receiver, repudiated the agreement and the tickets in the hands of the brokers became worthless. The brokers sued the Alton because it was solvent, while the other road was not.

THREE YOUNG MURDERERS.

Remarkable Case Reported From a Saxony School.

A BAND OF BOY STRANGLERS.

Their Weakly Companion in the Reformatory Choked to Death With a Pair of Suspenders While Asleep.

BERLIN, March 8.—A remarkable story of youthful crime is reported from Naumberg, in the province of Saxony. A boy named Brechel, from the Zeitz Reformatory, was sentenced last July to four years' imprisonment for strangling a comrade named Schorf with suspenders during a quarrel, according to the testimony of two of their comrades, Junge and Hoffman, both 17 years of age. Towards the end of last year a second boy was strangled, and the inquiry which followed resulted in the arrest of Junge, Hoffman and two other boys, Moebus and Blankenburg, aged 16 and 16 years. Junge and Hoffman then confessed to having committed perjury during the trial boys, Moebus and Blankenburg, aged 18-and 18 years. Junge and Hoffman then confessed to having committed perjury during the trial of Brechel, and declared on Wednesday last, when all four were arraigned, that the murder of Schorf was premeditated. Brechel, it appears, hated the reformatory and wanted to be sent to prison, whereupon Junge persuaded Brechel to murder Schorf, who was a weak little boy. Brechel at first was unwilling to do so. He afterwards yielded and attempted to strangle Schorf, but gave up the attempt, although Junge aided him, saying: "He is blue in the face already." The next day Brechel, instigated by Junge, strangled little Schorf while Junge covered the victim's face, as Brechel did not like to see it.

In the second murder case, the one which occurred at the end of the year, Junge suggested the same plan to Moebus and Blankenburg, who were anxious to escape from the reformatory, and a boy who slept between the two latter was chosen as the victim. During the night Moebus crept up to the victim's bed, tled his suspenders around the lad's neck without waking him and then Moebus pulled one end of the suspenders while Blankenburg pulled the other until the boy was dead.

The shrieks of the victim awoke the other the boys in the dormitory, but they were silenced by the threats of Moebus. The latter then returned to his bed and slept soundly until morning.

Junge and Moebus were both sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment, Blankenburg was sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment, and Hoffman to two years' imprisonment, Brechel will be tried again, this time on the charge of murder.

SHARP PRACTICE ALLEGED.

Advantage Taken of a Plaintiff's Inability to Understand English.

The final disposition of the $20,000 damage suit of John Slowenski, a Pole, against the Union Depot Railroad Company, before Judge Dillon, yesterday, developed semething very like sharp practice on the part of the attaches of the company engaged in looking after its legal interests. Slowenski, who cannot speak the English language, was on June 19, 1894, as passenger on a car of defendant company. He alleged, as the basis of his action, that he signalled the conductor, to stopp the gar at Kossuth avenue and the conductor rang the bell in recognition of the signal. The car checked up, but, it was claimed, started again before he had alighted. The result was that he was thrown to the ground and one of his shoulders dislocated and a rib broken. When the case was called the attorney for the railroad company presented a paper with the name of Slowenski attached releasing the company from any liability in the premises.

Mr. E. W. Banister, one of the attorneys for Slowenski, stated to the court that he did not admit the genuineness of the signature. He said that he had no knowledge of any settlement and the paper which had been presented was the first he had ever heard of it.

The court said there was very little doubt about it, as the signature was witnessed by three parties, who attest that they saw it affixed. He hardly deemed it right to hold the special jury called to try the case until an investigation could be had.

Mr. Banister said that ordinarily there would not be any question when such a paper is presented in court, but in this very case a certain other paper had been presented with the name of the plaintiff signed thereto and it turned out that the signature was not genuine, that the plaintiff had not signed the paper and that his name had been used without his authority or his knowledge.

Mr. Edward Robert, attorney for the railroad company, said: "You ought not to make such a statement unless you have the proof to sustain it."

Mr. Banister replied "I have the proof right here. If you wish it I will hav The final disposition of the $20,000 damage suit of John Slowenski, a Pole, against the Union Depot Railroad Company, be-

Mr. Edward Robert, attorney for the railroad company, said: "You ought not to make such a statement unless you have the proof to sustain it."

Mr. Banister replied "I have the proof right here. If you wish it I will have Mr. H. W. Adams, my associate counsel in this case, sworn, and he will substantiate every word I have said."

The Court, however, discharged the jury and allowed the paper to be filed, saying if it turned out that the signature is not that of the plaintiff he would strike the paper from the files.

Mr. Banister, in speaking of the matter to a Post-Dispatch reporter afterwards, stated that the conduct of the attaches of the railroad company had been fraught with sharp practices throughout. He added: "I do not attribute any of them to Mr. Roberts, who is an honorable gentleman, but to the general management. The facts are that when the accident occurred a man named Catovich, also a Pole, was on the rear platform of the car. The conductor got his statement and he signed it. It was not favorable to the railroad.

"About two weeks ago an employe of the company accompanied by a Pole went to Catovich, who has an imperfect knowledge of the English language, for the purpose, of getting another statement. The Pole, whose name is Fischman, wanted to pay Catovich some money, but the latter refused to talk unless there were witnesses present. A woman who could speak both Polish and English was called into the conference, and in her presence Catovich was offered 320 cash and a position as watchman at 32 per day if he would testify in favor of the railroad company. Catovich declined, saying that 320 did not amount to anything, when one of the men said: But the job is worth $200." Catovich, however, declined to trade. "Frevious to this a representative of the railroad approached Mr. Adams with a written document purporting to have been signed by the plaintiff in which the plaintiff cented ever having signed such a document. Later a railroad representative went to the place where Slowenski is employed, in East his own negligence. The plaintiff denied ever having signed such a document. Later a railroad representative went to the place where Slowenski is employed, in East St. Louis, and by some kind of subterfuse in duced him to settle the case for $125. They got his release, which they filed with Judge Dillon. He signed the paper, but it is doubtful if he comprehended its full meaning."

FATAL FOOLING.

End of a Kentuckian Who Pretended to Hunt Moonshiners.

ASHLAND, Ky., March 2.—Tom and Will Rose and Miles Belfrey were to-day brought to Louisa, Ky., for the assassination of William Ison. Ison, while at a social gathering at the residence of Jeff McKenzie, pretended to be a United States marchal inquiring after moonshine business. Miles Belfrey's daughter, who was present, left and spread the alarm.

Later in the night a gang approached the house calling McKenzie and Ison out. Ison was filled by William Belfrey. McKenzie was wounded badly but secured his gun and activate wounded William Belfrey, who is still at large Hekenzie is also in hiding fearing Bellrey's friands.

WHY ST. LOUIS PROSPERS.

In the interesting and valuable interviews with visiting merchants published in Friday's Post-Dispatch the reasons for the exceptionally prosperous condition of St. Louis trade are clearly set

Most potential of all, perhaps, is the heart of the great Mississippi Valley on the vastest system of navigable inland waters in the known world.

Next in importance is the fact that centering here from all directions is the greatest network of ramifying railways on the continent-river and rail affording cheap and quick trasportation to every part of its immense trade territory.

Utilizing these advantages, our merchants keep large and choice stocks of goods in every line, selected with special reference to the climatic needs and the personal tastes of the people whose wants they aim to supply.

These goods are sold at prices and on terms which are convincing an ever-increasing number of buyers that it is a waste of time and money to go to Chicago or New York.

And last but not least, our busines men recognize and respond cheerfully to the obligations of those personal courtesies and attentions which lift trade above the arid level of mere hard bargaining and establish pleasant personal elations on the basis of reciprocal ben-

These are some of the advantages of trading in St. Louis that are pointed out by our customers themselves. They account for the city's widening trade and growing prosperity.

STREET CAR IMPROVEMENTS.

The reports of projected theaters at the suburban termini of local street railways probably foreshadow the carrying out of plan agreed upon at a meeting in Chi-Western street railway managers. It was decided to engage companies to travel over a circuit of street railway theaters and gardens, giving entertainments in summer. The purpose, of course, is to induce people to ride in Summer theaters and concert gardens. if properly conducted, are good in their way. Macaulay once said that if the way, but there are so many things of doctrine of the attraction of gravitation ater importance that the street railroad corporations owe the public that it fiercely attacked. Those college professeems a mockery to offer them. There sors are finding out that the great rhetis so much to be done in the way of insing the comfort and convenience of their patrons that the cheap entertainment at the end of the line may well be spared until the comfort and convenience are secured.

The people of St. Louis want a complete transfer system. They want warmer cars in winter. They want the best of fenders and other appliances to save life. They want a class of employes whose efficiency will reduce the dangers and discomforts of street car traffic. They want more cars in the morning and evening so that passengers may be provided with

The obligations of the companies, how ever, appear to be the last things which occur to our street car managers. The Suburban Railroad, which is the first ntioned as projecting an open-air theater, owes the city a $25,000 station in Forest Park, which it shows no disposition to build. Its manager refused to niribute to the enlargement of the Forest Park lake, which would have both beautified the lake and helped the business of the road. The Lindell Railway could be induced to put money into the park lake only by a discount of $5,000 on a $26,000 obligation.

PUBLIC BENEFACTIONS.

According to an estimate made in the current number of Public Opinion the private gifts and bequests to colleges, museums, churches, libraries, art leries " and other helpful agencies' this country in 1894 amounted to $19.-867.116, as against $33,319,000 for the pre-

these figures are necessarily inexact, they may be accepted as close approximations of the amounts actually given for such purposes, and they bring up for consideration both sides of the tion of which such gifts and bequests are a part. It is not a new question. During that part of the Middle Ages which answers st nearly to our own time the more intelligent and active members of the community acquired immense estates, which they often distributed in charity exactly as immense estates are distrib-

d now. The Church was then the rdian of the poor, the patron of eduof art, of literature and of all the lties. Many of the great barons time showed their benevolence coruples by giving to the Church ideal having a poligious basis, dissen-

Party justice the best of these men are moved to give back for the common weal a part at least of that which they have drawn

It will never do to admit the soundn of a "gospel of wealth," under which any man can reap where he has not sown on the plea of intending to act as a steward for the community. On the other hand, it is a highly praiseworthy act when a man voluntarily surrenders to the com-munity superfluous gains that have come to him because of his superior intelligence and activity and good fortune. And the honor is increased if he does this during his lifetime.

The Post-Dispatch is especially proud to-day of its advertising columns and of the character, quality and variety of the advertisements displayed therein. No portion of its contents is better worth careful reading, and the advertisers have the satisfaction of knowing that more readers will see their advertisements in the Sunday Post-Dispatch than in any other Sunday newspaper published in St. Louis. The Sunday Post-Dispatch is delivered at as many St. Louis home as the Globe-Democrat and Republic geographical location of the city in the combined, and at twice as many as either

PLUTOCRACY AND SCIENCE.

College professors who like to think for lves and pursue original lines of investigation in social and economic questions should first inform themselves concerning the views, or rather interests, of the chief patron of their several institutions. Several have come to grief because of their failure to observe caution in this respect and others are shivering with apprehension.

Mr. Thomas B. Will was a very efficient Professor of Political Economy the Lawrence University at Appleton Wis. Like most professors of the science he believed in freedom of commerce, and as that is one of the cardinal principles of economy, he taught the doctrine honestly and persistently. But a lumbe king-a member of the United States Senate, by the way—who wants to keep out Canadian lumber, served notice on the university authorities that if such doctrine was to be taught in Lawrence he would withdraw his support. Where upon Mr. Will's chair was abolished. Some months ago Prof. Ely of the Wis consin State University got into a scrape for a similar offense and had to stand trial. He got off by the skin of his teeth. the verdict being that although not guilty, he must not repeat the offense.

Prof. Bemis of the Chicago University has been advocating the municipal con trol and ownership of gas works for some time. All went well until the other day, when the Standard Oil Trust got control of the Chicago gas works, and then Mr. Bemis was cautioned. He will now show whether he has the courage of his convictions, for he must sing in the trust key or not sing at all-at least not in the great Rockefeller Chicago University. These are three of many instances of the same sort. They all point the same made against any "interest" it would be orician knew what he was talking about Science must square itself with the special interests of the privileged classes. It must not analyze too closely the moral basis of monopoly or try to show that that basis is not moral after all. It must be humble. It must learn its place. It is all well enough for a professor in a trust college to serve God, but if he cannot do so without treading on Mammon's toes he lacks the prime qualification for his place.

THE PASSING OF ICARIA.

The failure of the French Revolution to better the condition of the man who depended upon his labor day by day for a living resulted in the attempt to found colonies of workers in other lands, unde conditions which should eliminate, if possible, the acquisition of wealth by individuals at the expense of their fellows. The most important and interesting of these colonies was that which Etlenne Cabet planted in Texas in 1846. Cabet had been a leader of the Carbonari in Paris—a famous secret society for the betterment of the working classes. He was also the author of a romance entitled "A Voyage in Icaria," which gave his merican colony its name, and which was quite popular among the Parisian workingmen.

Cabet secured a large tract of land in Texas, and Icaria was founded, with no less than 1,500 souls as a nucleus for the future co-operative commonwealth. It was not a religious body, tolerance being given to every form of belief. Cabet, however, was an enthusiast, who would not brook opposition in his leadership; and in 1849 the colony had its first schism, Cabet and 170 adherents removing to Cheltenham, a village near St. Louis and now within the city limits. Here the prophet of a new social economy died in 1856. The other branch of Icarians went to Nauvoo, Ill., then just vacated by the Mormons. They found no continuing city there, and after further splits and sions a remnant settled at Corning. Io. This is the Icaria of to-day, now numbering barely forty souls, which, it is said, is about to disband and divide its ccumulated property among the survivof these institutions.

If St. Louis were treated with justice by the State in the matter of the care of the insane the State would refund the money expended on the St. Louis Insane Asylum and pay all expenses for the care of our insane, except $2.50 week each, which is the rate paid by counties of the State for their insane sent to the State Asylums. On this basis the Legislature should appropriate over $100,-000 for the City Insane Asylum. But instead of this the House has cut the appropriation down to the paltry sum of

The Senate should amend the bill so as to give the City Insane Asylum not less than $75,000, and the House should recede from its wrongful position. We are slow to believe that the country members will persist beating the city out of its just dues.

When the Post-Dispatch took up the question of guaranteeing the honest administration of building and loan associations by a system of inspection, the intelligent leaders among the managers of these excellent institutions saw the wisdom of the suggestion and vigorously supported it. They saw that the continuance of looseness and irregularity which gave opportunity for dishonesty would impair public confidence in the sound as well as the unsound associations and thus check their good work. A campaign in favor of State supervision has resulted in practical assurance of a law providing for public reports and State inspection of all associations. Under this law opportunity for disgracefu mismanagement, speculation and dishonesty will be reduced to a minimum and the associations will be conducted on a While imperial Missouri harnesses and utilizes electricity, she is singularly free from the destructive force of that which plays so freely in storms. The records show that while in one year only one barn and three houses were struck by lightning in Missouri, other States lost from two to 117 barns and from two to twentythree houses. In making up the list of Missouri's exemptions from the calamities common to other communities this one should not be omitted.

The Indiana Legislature is said to have improved ex-President Harrison's prospects of a renomination, and a newly elected Congressman has written to Thomas B. ## It Is Very Gratifying.

From the Boonville (Mo.) Democrat.

The almost universal welcome the Democratic press of Missouri has extended to Col. C. H. Jones on his return to Missouri journalism and the assumption of editorial control of the Post-Dispatch, must be very gratifying to him, for it is a distinguished honor. honor. Already the Post-Dispatch un honor. Already the Post-Dispatch un har management gives evidence of renevalure and enterprise, and genuine devo-to. Democracy which is in lively sympa with the people, the only kind of Democracy worthy of the traditions, history, adplies of the party.

THE PASSING SHOW.

Thousands of the thoughtful, Intelligent persons who are entertained but not moved to religious feeling by Sam Jones, are unable to explain to their own salisfaction why they are attracted and repelled at almost the same moment in his ministrations. Sam Jones says of himself that he has been called vulgar, spectacular and a mountebank. The fast that he is neither of these, only adds effectiveness to the criticism that he would have risen to equal prominence and much greater influence if he had not carelessly laid himself open to charges of this character.

I believe that Sam Jones is thoroughly in earnest, just as I believe that the Salvation Army is in earnest. But if the Salvation Army would learn to sing correctly and hardrum, it would really accomplish wider and more permanent good. So with Sam Jones. If he would not be quite so irreverent and refrain from much of his humor, he might keep the churches in line with his work osition in any way.

There are two things troubling Sam Jones just now, and they are really at the bottom of the repellent surcharges which deeply thoughtful people encounter under his preaching. The first is his self-conceit. He knows he is bright and smart and that he has accomplished great good by his brightness and smartness. But his obrusive egotism jars on the finer feelings of persons who would be glad to shout his raises did he not rise to the situation first by shouting his own praises. This is no Christlike, but it is pre-eminently like St. Paul, who did not hesitate to indorse his wn righteousness. Moreover, Sam Jones has grown comfortably rich while going about doing the work of the Master. Nobody could possibly object to Sam's thriftiness did he not continually mention it. It is my conviction, however, after a careful study of him from a distance, that he found it absolutely necessary to get money and save money in order to render him independent of the wealthy church membership upon whose toes he knewhe must tread if he dared tell the whole truth. He saw, early in his ministry, that the deacons and the elders of aristocratic religion held the purse strings and that enever and wherever he saw occasio to say aught against the worldliness of the church the purse strings were drawn tightly against him. There was but one thing to do if he would continue his course, and that was to get comfortably rich himself. This fact has led him into two errorsof embittered speech against the organized churches and one of pride in his ability to meet worldliness on its own premises. Sam Jones is perfectly sinc forts to convert sinners to Christianity. He has simply permitted self-consciousness or self-congratulation to spread itself too thickly over his work.

This it is that foreshortens his usefulness undergone a marvelous transformation dur-ing the past twenty years. When Mr. Charles P. Johnson stood up in the Legisla-ture of Missouri, many years ago, and pleaded eloquently for the repeal of the certain locality the ministers of this good town were a unit in their indorsement of im. In fact they led the crusade against the law and it was at their urgent request that Mr. Johnson made and won the

They think differently now, And I notice in the recent ministerial movement in favor of social evil restriction the names of a few of the ministers who would not listen to reason or argument upon the subject twenacknowledge that the evil existed or that it had any excuse whatever for existing. They held that it was a crime to regulate such a monstrous traffic and that in adting its existence by restrictive laws the State would become particeps criminis.

But age and experience have added to the general knowledge on this subject. Mer everywhere are beginning to understand that a sin which has been committed every day since the world began must be regulated, restricted and kept within bounds un til such time as the millennium shall char-

Whisky and the social evil go hand in hand through the world and until the day comes when they can be crushed out the force of the State must be used to build high restrictive walls around them.

The Democratic City Convention appear to have resolved itself into a sort of continuous show, with the performance under

Upon the opening day of the convention at Uhrig's Hall it was interesting to observe that James J. Butler headed the Com-mittee on Credentials, and that Brother-inlaw Hardy was both sergeant-at-arms and member of the Committee on Permanen Organization. I could not discover a single member of the Butler family on the Committee on Resolutions, which bears out the cunning blacksmith's old motto: "I care not who writes the platform so long as I

And when the twenty-eight performers were named as a committee to keep up a continuous session until after the Republicans had made their nominations, James J. Butier again headed the list, with Col. Ed Butier plainly in syldence from the Nineteenth Ward.

teenth Ward.

Maybe this sort of thing is all right.

Perhaps it is proof of the fairness and opportunities incident to our American system of municipal government. Possibly the Filleys and the Butlers are an absolute on, to hold the hoi polloi in check and give us confidence in our ability to live together in blesses peace with all sorts and conditions of peo

But it strikes the average citizen that there is a somewhat disproportionate ad-mixture of Butierism in the Democracy of this city.

In superabundance of tourists to Jerusa-lem this spring, and the fact that with cheapened ocean travel the journey to the Holy Land annually grows more thronged, is proof that sacred history is lending to this closing century of ours an impressive spectacle.

Jaffa, only that the spell is broken by the shrill whistle of the locomotive which passes out twice a day across the sacred plains to the Holy City.

There was something in the life and suffering and death of the lowly Nazarene which has reached down into the age of materialism and non-superstition and left its image upon it. I think it must have been the doctrine of love and helpfulness and good-will and forgiveness which he preached. There are fewer men to-day who believe in a material hell-fire and more men who believe in Christ than ever before in the world's history. This it is which keeps inorid's history. This it is which keeps in-reasing the tide of pilgrimage to Jerusa-m. It is this spirit of faith in the Christly am. It is this spirit of faith in the control of the principle of love for fellow-men which will execute the make the world better, even as it now turns the faces of weary and footsore travelers toward the Holy City.

There is a so-called non-partisan move ment on foot in Chicago to cleanse and purify the municipal affairs of that city. Republicans, Democrats, Populists, wealth, poverty, women and children are in it and its proportions have alarmed the regular party organizations.

I haven't much confidence in the perms nent good of such movements. But they are upheavals which, for the moment, stop the tide of party corruption; and while they are lways captured eventually by partiss they serve in the meantime a very excellent purpose.

No one will question the amount of good No one will question the amount of good accomplished in New York City by Dr. Parkhurst and the Lexow Committee. Their work, so far as politics is concerned, resulted in simply transferring the municipality from the bossism of Croker to the bossism of Platt, but it temporarily stopped the plundering of the city treasury and frightened the police department into a semblance of honesty and respectability which will require years of effort to penetrate again by corruption.

This Chicago movement is much on the same line. It gives premise of upturning the rotten powers which have disgraced, demoralized and robbed the people. The Republican party will capture it, not because it is smarter than Democracy, but be-cause it makes greater pretensions to deency and finds it profitable to run along close to every wave that promises votes.

And I have no doubt that eventually the good people who live in Chicago will profit by the sudden groundswell of respectability.

That bank robbery up in Iowa last week had an old Missouri flavor about it which adds to its interest. The dash into the town, the shots at the cashier, the grasping of the bags of money, the wild ride down the streets, the hurried organization of the cosse comitatus, the battle at the barn and the final capture of the robbers, all consti-tute a story which is familiar as the al-

St. Patrick's Day happens to Sunday this year.

I can easily remember when it was the gayest day in all the St. Louis calendar; when business was pretty generally sus-pended and the streets were crowded with interested sight-seers; when the procession was miles and miles in length and occupied hours of time in passing a given point; when the newspapers devoted pages to a of St. Patrick banquet, and the city gave itself over to enjoyment. But the celebration seems of late to have dwindled to the almost insignificant pro-portions of a Fourth of July annniversary. A few lodges of the Ancient Order of Hi-bernians and Knights of Father Mathew plod listlessly through the streets, atttract-ing very little attention and seeming to be themselves weary of the job.

I am sorry for this. The old St. Patrick's Day was just as interesting to me as to any Catholic Irishman in this town, and I have stood for hours in rain or snow watching the merch of the faithful. I cannot account for the absence of interest in the day, un-less the truth has got abroad that St. Patrick was only a man, intensely patriotic and full of self-sacrifice; that he did no more than any other devoted priest should have done and that he had nothing to do with driving the snakes out of Ireland.

But his passing from remembrance by public demonstration creates a hiatus in the list of holydays, so common and so mem-

"There are men in this city," says Sam that would break the heart of an angel."

John Norton had his share of them. He worked faithfully to meet his obligations, out if he had lived a century longer he would foubtless have been just as deeply in debt. He was generous and gave something every lay to persons in distress, all the while raveling along himself under grievous burlans.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Thanks for a paper that will publish the people's wants. In reading your article on "Cheap School Books," it strikes me that it is very important. What you say, and it is view in the schools and the said of the pupils have been found useless. They have to use, for instance, their old "Robinson's arithmetic," and "Farvey's Grammar," no better books to be found, but still the books ordered by the Board had to be paid for by the parents. Hoping some one will take up this matter.

"Uncle Tom" is right in his assertion that no great benefit can come of the free coinage of silver, for money is nothing more than a representative of value, and value is human effort or labor. Now if men have than a representative of value, and value is human effort or labor. Now if men have not a free scope to exercise their powers, money, whether scarce or plentiful, will be of no benefit to them. Man sells his labor for money, and with the money he buys labor; or in other words, he exchanges labor for labor on a basis of value for value, for the material to which he applies his labor—that is, if material is used—he does not create. That is God's free gift to man. Now if man has nothing but his labor and has not the opportunity to apply it, what on earth has he to buy money with? About money starting people to work, that is all bosh. What started the primitive man to hunt? and to fish? His wants—and that is what makes it necessary for the modern man to work.

Plea for the Dude's Cane.

Editor of The Post-Dispatch. The utter fallacy of one man presuming to prescribe what another shall and shall not wear, bah! "Straight Cut" in his letter of the 5th successfully betrays his idiotic egotism in his reference to the cane. His assumed knowledge of the origin and establishment of the custom of using canes is indicative of a mind burdened with self-appointed, superfluous tasks; it bespeakshis antipathy for individualism in dress and manner. Shades of Ward McAllister, has your mantle descended upon such an iconoclastic pretender?

has your mantle descended upon such an iconoclastic pretender?

Perhaps to conform with his ideas, we shall have to discard the collar-button and no longer combat with its totally deprayed penchant for disappearing. Perhaps he will soon decree it is no longer "au fait" to wear socks.

While it is true that England has not yet been afflicted with a Sugar Trust, Standard Oil Trust, or any of the monster monopolies we have to contend with, her state is not altogether a happy one as regards the exactions of corporations. Mr. Robert P. Porter showed, in an able article a short time ago, that the English railroads are rapidly beggaring the country districts. They have not only charged "all the traffic will bear," but much more. The result is that the movement to nationalize the English railways has received a powerful im-ride free as far as one pleases. Englan will be a pretty good country to live in.

St. Louis, March 8. "Uncle Tom" Makes a Concession.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch stated in yesterday's Post-Dispatch is correct—as far as it goes. For his information be it said that the writer, by going to the main root of the socially diseased tree, and there finding the seat of the malady, simply uttered his honest convictions on the subject under discussion.

As I am a firm believer in the new political economy, "Progress" may rest assured that the little word free has no terror for me, whether it be used in connection with free coinage or free trade, free land and free men. In fact I am in favor of anything to which the word free may properly be attached.

St. Louis, March 7.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Tom Johnson is wrong in supposing that a gentleman is "one of those effeminate, dear creatures commonly called dudes," or that a gentleman is a "lick-spittle, sycophantic thing." In fact, the tenor of Mr. Johnson's letter leads me to believe that he is of the opinion there is no such thing as a gentleman. For his information I would point to a few men, here and abroad, whe are gentlemen in spite of being well dressed, well groomed and some of them well off. For example: Senator Palmer, Wm. L. Wilson, Gov. Altgeid, Vice-President Stevenson, Roger Q. Mills. Mr. Gladstone, John Ruskin, Walter Besant. These I give merely as examples of true gentlemen—manly men-without vulgarity or hiuster, cleanly in thought and habit, and, in spite of their dress fitting their station, having nothing of To the Editor of the Post-pecial to the Post-Dispatch. NEW YORK, March 2.—There are seriou NEW YORK, March 2.—There are serious differences coming up between the men who are now posing as Mr. Platt's lieutenants. The most serious is between Congressman Quigg and Police Commissioner Murray. Mr. Murray has the ambition to become a second Chester A. the high-handed manner of Mr. Arthur. Congressman Quigg has ambitions in this line also. Each is a favorite with Mr. Platt.

Mr. Murray because of his position, the result of the Platt-Gilroy deal, has taken on himself the power of leader of the Republican organization in the city and insists on his right to dish out patronage. As a patronage disher he has not been as successful as he hoped. He has named all the Republicans appointed by the Sheriff, but the Mayor ignores his claims, and rubile Works Commissioner Brookfield, Joseph Murray of the Excise Board, and the Corporation Counsel have shown no disposition to recognize him.

Congressman Quigg, who has been looked on by the old gang as something of a freak in politics, is ambitious himself. He has formed high ideas of his value to the party and has refused to bow the knee to Mr. Murray and his gang, and now they are on the verge of open warfare, it is said. Unless Mr. Platt puts a curb on Mr. Murray he can not hold Mr. Quigg in line. Mr. Quigg has an advantage over Mr. Murray in the matter of brains. He was a valued employe of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, and at the latter's request was made Secretary to National Committeeman Carter in the last presidential election, when Mr. Reid was a candidate for the vice presidency. That position brought him into prominence and the friendship of a number of progressive men in the party here. They saw he was more than an ordinarily good taker, and they forced him into the nomination for Congress to fill out the unexpired term of Colonel Fellows, when the latter was elected District Attorney in 1882. Almost the entire old gang opposed him, and but for the backing of the more prominent members of the Union. League the nomination would have been traded off with Tammany Hall. That put Mr. Quigg under no obligations to the old Republican Committee. Mr. Platt, when he found he could not control Mayor Strong if nominated, hit on the pian of making Mr. Quigg under no obligations to the old Republican committee. Mr. Plattron, it is head t

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.-According to e report to the State Department from United States Consul Taney, at Belfast, the past year was the most disastrous one in trade ever experienced there. This was accounted for by the prolonged stagnation in the United States. The United States consumes from 50 to 60 per cent of the Belfast product of fiaxen textiles. The shrinkages in values amounts to $5,000,000, eating up all profits, and in instances creating a less account. There was also a curtailment of production amounting to from one-quarter to one-third of the capacity. These things were charged to the American tariff agitation and on this point the Belfast Board of Trade had this to say: "Our chief desideratum with regard to America's duties is that the tariff shall be rarely altered. If the rates are high it is the Americans who pay them. Mr. McKinley has said: 'It is the foreigners who pay the tariff,' but is not this almost childish? for if we send £100 worth of the goods to the States and pay £35 duty on the £100 worth, we shall certainly not sell these goods for less than £135." ## BULLETS THROUGH THE DOOR.

How a Female Railroad Employe Put Two Desperadoes to Flight.

DULUTH, Minn., March 9 .- Shortly before midnight Mrs. Richards, the Northern Pacific agent at Kimberley, a small station near Brainard, overheard two men outside her window planning to rob the east-bound express. One of them wanted to throw ties on the track, but the other was of the opinion that the best plan would be to wreck the train at the past end of the bridge. It could be done in such a way that the express car would not fall into the river. Just as the men had settled on this plan the woman got out of her bed to give the als. In. Before she touched the key one of the robbers proposed to go inside the station and await the train, which was not due for several hours, at the same time trying to smash the door in. Instantly the woman grabbed a revolver and put several bullets through the door, causing the surprised desperadoes to fice. Word was telegraphed along the line, but no trace of the men was found.

Louis. Louis.

The earth will cast its weird shadow over the face of the moon, its faithful servant, to-night, and for several hours the silver satellite will wear the dull red, coppery aspect of a new peanut. Naked eyes, opers glasses, field glasses and big telescopes will be directed toward the Queen of Night in her hour of mourning.

The eclipse will be total, and visible in St. Louis. The moon will enter the shadow at 7:56 p. m., and the eclipse will be total at 8:59 p. m. The middle of the eclipse will be at 8:39 p. m., and totality will end at 10:37 p. m. The moon will leave the shadow at 11:35 p. m. Prof. Pritchett will observe the eclipse through the large telescope in the Washington University observators.

Bad Defeat of St. Louis County's Capital Removal Scheme.

SEDALIANS OUGHT TO PUT UP

Senator Yeater's Bill Providing for the Deposit of Bonds With the Governor.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 9.—The defeat of the St. Louis County resolution for submission of a constitutional amendaccomplished in the Senate to-day. The vote against submission was 26 noes, to 2 ayes, only Messrs. Wurdemann, author of ayes, only Messrs. Wurdemann, author of the resolution, and Morton, who has all along opposed the Sedalia people in the interest of Jefferson City, being its only supporters. Morton's idea seems to be that Sedalia cannot provide proper guarantees that she will give Missourt such a Capitol as her standing among the States demands, and he desires that impression spread as widely as possible, to the end that the entire scheme may fall through. Mr. Wurdemann, on the other hand, was really to ill to be on his feet this morning, and as a matter of course, his championship lacking agressiveness and snap, his cause languished and was lost. His opening argument in support of the resolution was to the effect that Sedalia's proposition was vague and indefinite, and not properly guaranteed and vouched for and that, on the other hand, the most responsible and the wealthiest men and business' associations in St. Louis stood sponsors for the performance in good faith of that provision of the pending resolution providing for the deposit of a two million dollar guarantee. As for the legal question involved, there had been competent advice to the effect that two such propositions could be submitted as well as one, and if that were not so, that Supreme Court would settle that.

Senstor Yeater-tried to prevent consideration of the resolution at all, on the ground that it was out of order; but being over-ruled as to that, he addressed himself to the merits of the proposition. Submission of this resolution would be an act of bad faith; would be throwing dust in the eyes of the people; two proposition diametrically opposed could not be submitted to a yea and nay vote at the same time; this second resolution for submission flies in the face of the constitution, by trying to settle in advance the question whether or not the Capital shall be removed from the City of Jefferson to the City of Sedalia; the former resolution seeks to provide that under certain conditions by the the proposition—it came from the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange the resolution, and Morton, who has all almost endless litigation.

Dr. Tunnell said that there was geographical objection to St. Louis County. The location of the capital there would accomodate one-fourth of the population of the State, and inconvenience all the rest.

Goodykoontz declared that it was a fair and square fight between Jefferson City and Sedalia. He would oppose injecting any complications into it.

The roll-call on the submission to the people of the St. Louis County proposition stood:

and Sedalia. He would oppose injecting any complications into it.

The roll-call on the submission to the people of the St. Louis County proposition stood:

Ayes—Morton, Wurdemann—2.

Noes—Amelung, Ballard, Baskett, Brewster, Busche, Davisson, Drum, Dunn, Gash, Goodykoontz, Gray, Kennish, Klene, Landrum, Lyman, McClintle, Morrissey, Mott, O'Bannon, Orchard, Peers, Powers, Seaver, Tunnell, Yeater—28.

After the defeat of the resolution Senator Yeater called up his bill providing for the deposit with the Governor of bonds or of contract obligations sought to be imposed by the resolution for removal to Sedalia or otherwise under the joint and concurrent resolution was gone into, and numerous amendments offered. Morton wanted to amend that portion of the bill that gave the Sedalians until August, 1886, to file their guarantees of good faith so that such guarantees must be filed within six months. Lost.

That point was very fully gone into, and the point made that the political parties would want to treat of the Sedalia removal question in their State platforms, and therefore, in order that they might arrive at a correct understanding of what Sedalia really offers, the date for filing guarantees should not be later than May 1 of next year. This was agreed to.

Morton moved that the amount of $3,000,000-be placed in the bill as the sum which the Sedalia people should put up, and this provoked a charge of unfairness and unreasonable animosity from Senator Yeater, Mr. Lyman amended to read $2,000,000, and this was likewise fought with vigor by Yeater, who declared that the Governor could very easily decide whether the guarantees after the sus also instructed by this act to let the people of the State know it. The debate as the bill had been amended to provide. If such guarantees were not sufficient, he was also instructed by this act to let the people of the State know it. The debate as the whether the Assembly ought to name a figure for Sedalia's guarantee was continued after the noon recess, but it was finally defeat

Louis County) who was "fair, fat and forty," and if she were permitted to engage in the competition neither of the other candidates would have any show. He twas in favor of keeping the rich widow out of the competition—she was already well provided for.

Morton declared that the Sedalia proposition had nothing behind it, while here was something tangible. That from St. Louis County was definite and substantial.

Mr. Gray opposed the second resolution—it would complicate the situation and make almost endless litigation.

House passed a large number of bills at the afternoon session. The bill prohibiting barbering on Sunday, which was passed by a good stiff vote, provides for a fine of from $25 to $50 and imprisonment from fifteen to thirty days.

Senator Mott's bill allowing the Collector of St. Louis to destroy deliaquent personal tax bills of more than five years' standing was passed by the House. The Republicans deny that this bill covers an attempt to shield the Collector from criticism on account of bad book-keeping, but this charge has been made repeatedly by the Democrats of both House and Senate during the pendency of this bill.

The House passed the bill authorising the reorganization of the St. Louis Public Library Board, but it is doubtful whether it will have time to pass the Senate. The board would, if the act was passed, be composed of nine directors, appointed by the Mayof, to serve for three years each—after the terms of the first six, for one and two years regpectively, had been filled—and serve without compensation. They would have full control of the property, money and management of the library.

A bill was passed providing that 'in all actions where exemplary or punitive damages are recoverable, the petition shall state separately the amount of such damages are recoverable, the petition shall state separately the amount of such damages are recoverable, the petition shall state separately the amount of such damages are recoverable, the petition shall state separately the amount of such shall be separately stated in the exemplary or punitive damages are recoverable and are allowed by the fury, the amount thereof shall be separately stated in the state or County governments, the incumbent of which shall become insane while serving; said appointment to be made on the certificate of the Probate Judge of the County or municipality that such person is insane.

The most important bill passed in the Senate during the afternoon from the Si. Louis standpoint was that championed by Senator Klene at the insufficient and of Phelps County and William R. Goody-kontz of Washington County. The Senator who has incurred their displeasure is John F. Morton of Ray, and his offense was the opposition of the separation of the Agricultural College from the State University, offered during a discussion on the floor early in the week. Senators Harrison and Goodykonts both want the act of separation to be passed, and their interest is found in the statement that if such separation is declared for Phelps County will be a candidate for re-election. This is a serious subject with these gentlemen, and it is now claimed that they are ready to fight on the floor against the ratification of the action of their caucus in indorsing the Morton (so-called O'Meara) election bill, which provides for a certificate plan of registration, but does not materially change the form vides for a certificate plan of registration, but does not materially change the form of proceedure in the office of the Recorder of Voters, and does not limit, but rather enlarges the present powers of that official. Messrs. Goodykontz and Harrison yesterday admitted their intention to fight the Morton bill, and did not deny, when asked, that they were opposing it because of the opposition of Mr. Morton and associates to the scheme of separation.

" FREE LIBRARY BOARD MEETING.

Reports of Committees on the Work of the Past Month. The Board of Directors of the St. Louis Free Public Library held its regular month-ly meeting yesterday afternoon. President Whitelaw occupied the chair and there were also present Mrs. C. I. Filley, Miss L. B. Whitelaw occupied the chair and there were also present Mrs. C. I. Filley, Miss L. B. Halsted and Messrs, Meysenberg, Rowse and Soldan. The Auditing Committee reported as to the correctness of the accounts for the past month. The Executive Committee reported that it authorized the Librarian to send boxes of books to the schools for circulation among the pupils and teachers and also to establish a delivery station of brooks without too great expense. The Book Committee reported 147 volumes withdrawn from circulation and 114 of the same replaced, together with 17 volumes withdrawn from circulation and 114 of the same replaced, together with 17 volumes of 1235 volumes of which 1150 were multiple copies of the most popular juveniles, was reported. The committee also authorized the publication of a finding list of fiction. The Administration Committee reported the adoption of an improved newspaer file and also the appointment of two new apprentices, Miss Helen Tutt and Miss Katherine T. Moody and the appointment of a new santor, R. S. Kedge, to take the place of Richard Heade, who died Feb. 21, after having been in the Library's service for more than twenty years. The Librarian's report noted the addition during February of 1750 volumes of which 25 volumes were gifts and 45 volumes of which 26 volumes were gifts and 5 volumes are present to the total home 5 volumes and a gain of fifty in the average daily home issue and a gain of 115 in the average daily insue in all departments. ## FIGHT OF BARGE LINES.

New Orleans Elevator Company Makes Discriminating Rates.

The competition for the barge business, caused by the bid of the newly-organized Interstate Transportation Company for a division of the river traffic, led to the issuance of a circular letter yesterday by the New Orleans Elevator Company, which gives the Mississippi Valley Transportation Company a decided advantage over its rival. A Substantial Advance in the Company a decided advantage over its rival.

The letter states that transferring bulk grain from barges to vessels will be ½ cent per bushel on grain shipped in barges owned or towed to New Orleans by the Mississippl Valley Transportation Company, and that I cent per bushel will be charged on grain shipped by any other barges or barge lines. As the New Orleans elevators are controlled by the Mississippl Valley Transportation Company, the significance of the discrimination in rates for transferring is apparent. It is a severe blow at the Interstate Transportation Company says that his company did not come here to fight any existing lines. "Our rates," said he, "are based on strictly business principles. We will treat all shippers alike, and give no rebates to individuals."

buyers a day, all of whom were very much elated over the prospects of a good spring trade, and thought St. Louis the best mar-ket for dry goods, boots and shoes in the country. The Texas trade is very large this year, said he, as is the trade with all the Southern States.

Mr. T. H. Parker of the Rozier Hotel said

Hotels Filled With Merchants Buying Spring Stocks.

HOW MANAGERS LOOK AT IT.

Certain Indication of Bright Prospects for the Spring and of St. Louis' Great Commercial Growth.

itors were merchants from territory sur-rounding St. Louis or made adjacent thereto by reason of superior railroad facil-

The managers of the various hostelries are unanimous in the opinion that no such influx of visitors has been seen here in many years, and then only on the occasion of a convention of some kind.

At many of the hotels prospective guests have engaged rooms by telegraph, and it has been amusing during the week to watch the worried look on the faces of the hotel clerks as they were kept busy telling this man that it was impossible to give him a room of the fifth, as the first vacant room was on the eighth, or remarking to that man that he could not have his room until the previous guest had finished dressing and given it up.

The condition of the hotels is the best indication of a city's prosperity, for if they are empty, or only moderately filled, it is evident that the city is not doing a satisfactory business. But if they are crowded the inference is that there is some reason for it, and that must be that the people have been attracted by some advantage offered by the city.

In the case of St. Louis the advantage is that of well-assorted stocks of goods, low prices and superior transportation facilities, as has been previously shown by the Post-Dispatch.

A Post-Dispatch reporter obtained interviews with the managers of the various hotels, and their opinions are worthy of perusal.

Following each interview are some of hotels, and their opinions are workers perusal.

Following each interview are some of the merchants who have made headquarters at that particular hotel. These merchants came to St. Louis to buy goods, made their purchases and went home satisfied in every respect and ready to give a supplementary order to the first St. Louis traveling salesman who visits them.

AT THE PLANTERS'.

In the absence of Manager Weaver Clerk Cunningham of the Planters' said that the Planters' had been filled to its capacity during the past week as well as for several weeks previous, and a glance at the register would show that a large percentage of the guests were jobbing and retail merchants, not only from the West and Southwest but from Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee, indeed, Georgia, and from all points down the river.

but from Illinois, kentucky and Tennessee, indeed, Georgia, and from all points down the river.

Mr. Cunningham said he had handled an average during the week of 517 people each day. "I think," said he, "that the people feel satisfied that the tariff and financial questions, while not entirely settled, will not be a disturbing element for some time, and they are confident that if the country is left to itself it will show its old-time life and activity. And we all'know what that means. There is no doubt that St. Louis has the best standing in the financial world of any city to-day and this impression is sofirmly imbedded in the minds of the merchants that it assures them that a city that has such good credit can buy or manufacture more cheaply than any other, and consequently can offer better inducements to visiting buyers."

AT THE LINDELL. Clerk Chidsey, of the Lindell, said that business had been phenomenally good the past week; that he had handled over 500 people every day during the week, and that the visitors were largely country merchants and commercial men.

"This increase," said he, "was made up of a solid growth that is becoming greater each year in St. Louis, and did not represent any conventions or accidental transient travel. It was an evidence to me of the wonderful growth of St. Louis as a commercial center and a great central distributing point. The Post-Dispatch is doing a great work for St. Louis. The six columns of interviews with visiting merchants, published Friday, was a great stroke, and very apropos of the heavy visiting list of the week."

Roth, manager of the new St. Nicholas, told the Post-Dispatch reporter that his hotel had been full, during the past week, of visitors from territory adjacent to St. Louis, "and," said he, "we are receiving telegrams constantly from merchants, commercial men and others, asking us to reserve rooms. We have, during the week, handled an average of 175 people per day. This indicates, to me, the wondrous growth, in a commercial way, of this city. From what I can see, the rush promises to continue for some time yet."

AT THE ST. JAMES. Thos. P. Miller, proprietor of the St.James Hotel, said: "Our business showed a great increase during the past week. We have had a large number of merchants from Missouri, Southern Illinois, Arkansas and Texas, and quite a number of horse buyers from Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. We have probably handled an average of 160 guests per day during the week. St. Louis has a much larger hotel capacity than in previous years, owing to the construction of several new hotels the past year, and the fact that all of the hotels in the city are doing a good business would seem to me to indicate that the crowd of visitors is

CARTER'S BODY FOUND.

Searching for Remains of the Longfellow Wreck Victims.

CINCINNATI, O., March 9.-The body of the veteran clerk of the Longfellow, Capt. J. L. Carter, was found in the wreck that had been caught and tied to shore near erside. He was pinned to the boiler that had been caught and tied to shore near Riverside. He was pinned to the boiler deck by a portion of the cabin deck which had fallen on him. A more extended search will be made in that part of the wreck, where it is supposed the bodies of Mr. Aldridge and of the bartender, Chauvet, may be found. The wreckage of the Long-fellow is scattered for a distance of twenty-five miles down the river.

There have been no developments to-day to indicate that the death list will be enlarged. Mr. C. J. Aldridge, son of David Aldridge of Rome, N. Y., and Mr. Joseph Aldridge, brother of the drowned passenger, arrived to-day and began searching for his body.

Mr. D. G. Wood and wife and Miss Dalirymple of Cardington, O., who were passengers on the Longfellow, resumed their trip this evening on the Buckeye State.

The list of ascertained casualties obtained to-night does not differ materially from that of lest night. The third body has been recovered since dark to-night at the wreck at Riverside. It is almost certain that it is the body of W. J. Auli of Dayton. This leaves yet unrecovered the impusing our leanung sansunary jo soppod of New Orleans Transportation Co., to which the Longfellow belonged, says he feels sure there were not more than six lives lost.

There are reports of deckhands and roustabouts missing, but all of these were wide awake at the time of the accident and they are always promptest to escape. However, they had just shipped and no list of their names was made.

All the officers and passengers are accounted for, either as saved or listed by name among the dead or missing.

There cleaming the collision could have been avoided.

Honored Fred Dougless' Memory, special to The Post-Dispatch. JACKSON, Miss., March 3.—Seven hundred negroes, men and women, met here last aight to pay honor to Frederick Douglass. Handsome resolutions referring to the depassed as the most distinguished American citizen of his color, and pledging the race to honor his name, were adopted. The practice of the occasion was Hon. James Hill, Mississippi member of the National Republish Executive Committee. He said that Douglass was a greater man than Abraham Lincoln, and the people of the United States should hereafter meet annually in honor of his memory.

DR. PARKHURST COMES TO ST. LOUIS

He Will Give Aid to the Sabbath Closing Crusade

SAM JONES WILL LEND AID.

Some Willing to Close and Others Will Have to Is the Way Dr. Werlein Puts the Situation.

Dr. Parkhurst's visit to St. Louis in the interest of the Sabbath Association, although not definitely settled, will no doubt take place within a few days. An invitation, indorsed by the unanimous vote of the association, has been tendered him, and he will scarcely fall to respond. The movement, as now inaugurated, is not on sectarian lines nor is it a church scarcely fall to respond.

The movement, as now inaugurated, is not on sectarian lines nor is it a church reovement. It is in the interests of humanity, for the benefit of employes who are obliged to work seven days every week, though entitled to one day of rest. The law has given them this right but, unaided they can not enforce it. Now a sentiment is being created in their favor which will be encouraged and fostered until it bears fruit.

Sam Jones was approached on the subject and asked if he intended to join hands with Dr. Parkhurst in this work. He said: "I am not here to close the saloons, to colonize the bawdy houses or pick out corrupt politicians. That's not a part of my programme and I don't propose to be switched off on any side track job. I have done it ocasionally in other cities, but found after I got the game treed, or chased him into his hole, I couldn't get any one to shoot him off the limb or dig him out. So I got disgusted and quit.

STRONGLY IN FAYOR OF IT.

"The movement is a good one. I am strongly in favor of it and shall take occasion in my talk Sunday to speak of the matter. In regard to Dr. Parkhurst coming here, I know little of the matter, but if Dr. Parkhurst or any one else comes here to reform St. Louis, unless the people themselves do some hustling, when they fold their tents and go away they will leave things about as they found them.

"Dr. Parkhurst has done a noble work for New York. He went in with the determination to win or die and he won. Now the man who reforms St. Louis must be a local man. He must use his own methods and be prepared for whatever abuse he receives, for as soon as he makes a move every one will jump on him and call him an imitator and accuse him of trying to gain a little cheap notoriety. That must be expected.

"Why, after Dr. Parkhurst had won his fight in New York an Episcopal minister got up one day and offered a resolution indorsing his efforts and work, but the other ministers voted it down. They said it wasn't according to scripture; that Christ ne

When you hit one end it files all to pieces. Not that I mean there are not good Christians here, but they do not realize the force against them and make fittle effort to change matters.

'I always find the gait the gang strikes is gauged by the will of the better element. If they see the better element quiet and easy-going, they are quick to take advantage of it and go just as far as possible. So it will always be until the people wake up to a realization of the way these things are tending. St. Louis is no worse, no better than other large cities, but I am not here to inaugurate any crusade against any one or anything."

DR. WERLEIN TALKS.

Rev. S. H. Werlein, pastor of the Lafayette Park Methodist Church, and President of the Sabbath Association, was also seen in connection with what the association proposed doing. Said he:

"Dr. Parkhurst's coming has been agitated and a resolution adopted asking him to deliver in St. Louis a course of lectures on his crusade in New York, and perhapshelp and benefit us by his presence and support. The fact is, we have hit upon this particular time as being propitious for starting the movement. Sam Jones being here now, he can enlist considerable sympathy for the cause and will do us much good, though he will not be otherwise interested. The Sabbath Association is not a new thing at all. It was organized two years ago by Dr. George, Traveling Secretary of things. It is comparatively easy to arouse a sentiment, but unless that sentiment is crystallized and results in something definite it is useless. That is why we have laid our plans first ready to act, then we selzed the propitious time when Sam Jones had already aroused the people by his labors and his characteristic parameters of not articipate much trouble. Already some have of the competitors will have to do so. That will settle it. Those are scriptural animals. When I say dog that's the given name of half of my audience and every fellow knows that.

The reason the devil has more servants in this world to-day than God has Is that the devil gives them the best things first an dafterwards robs and debauches them.

Mr. Jones anneunced that at a clock this afternoon there will be a meeting in Must Hall for men only. He said that on the Sabbath there are thousands of clerks, railroad men, travelling salesmen, laborers and others who should attend. The wommer were excluded, he said, because there would not be room enough for them, and because they were ahead of the men in plety and should hole back. # WHAT?

OUR STOCK AND OUR TRADE.

WHY? OUR SPRING STOCK OF OVERCOATS was never so large, handsome and varied. We have them in the newest weaves, latest shapes and finest trims, and prices are low.

WHY? OUR LINES OF MEN'S SUITS have never presented prettier patterns, more shapely styles, or been been built out of finer fabrics. Many lines are exclusively our own, and values are such as only manufacturers can give.;

WHY? OUR BOYS' AND CHILDREN'S DE-PARTMENT is full of the most serviceable Suits ever constructed for the use of Boys. We have many lines entirely new in cut and finish. We show some very handsome and desirable novelties of this season. The more our kind of Boys' Clothing is known the more it is appreciated.

WHY? WE ARE PROGRESSIVE in our Furnishing Department. It presents all the new and sought-for spring shapes, shades and effects. All the standard and desirable brands and qualities in all lines of wear. It is quite questionable if there is as well an appointed and thoroughly furnished Furnishing Department in the city. There surely is none where goods and values can be bettered and tastes equally well gratified.

QUEENSBERRY HELD FOR TRIAL.

The Marquis Must Answer for Libelling Oscar Wilde.

DISGRACEFUL EPITHET.

"I Did It to Save My Son," Was

Queensberry was to-day at the Marquis of Police Court formerly committed for trial by Mr. Newton, the sitting magistrate, on the charge of having libelled Oscar Wilde in leaving at the Albemarle Club, on Feb. 23, a card upon which was written a disgraceful epithet.

graceful epithet.

The Marquis declared in open court that The Marquis declared in open court that he wrote the card simply to bring matters to a head and to save his son, and that he abided by what he wrote.

Mr. Edward H. Carson, Q. C., M. P., formerly Solicitor-General for Ireland, and who was counsel in most of the Government prosecutions in Ireland under the Crimes Act, defended the Marquis of Queensberry. The court was crowded with well-known people. Oscar Wilde, who wore a long dark-blue overcoat, drove to the police court in great style in a carriage and pair with footman and coachman. Accompanying Mr. Wilde was Lord Aifred Douglass, son of the Marquis of Queensbury, but he was not allowed to remain in courteduring the examination of Mr. Wilde.

EVERYBOODY KNOWS OSCAR.

Mr. Wilde was finally placed on the stand and began his evidence with an air of languid loftiness. When he was asked if he and began his evidence with an air of languid loftiness. When he was asked if he was Oscar Wilde, the author and dramatist, the witness repiled:

"I think I am well-known." This remark made Mr. Newton interpose sharply, saying: "Answer the question, please."

Thereupon plaintiff replied: "Yes."

The reproof of the magistrate caused Mr. Wilde to assume a less important air.

Replying to the questions put to him by his own counsel, plaintiff said that he first became acquainted with the Marquis of Queensberry in 1893. He remembered lunching with Lord Alfred Douglass, who is the Marquis' second son, and who was born in 1870, in the Cafe Royal during the month of October, 1892, when the defendant entered the room and by invitation of his son sat down at the same table.

Continuing, Mr. Wilde said he did not see the Marquis of Queensberry again until 1893, when he and Lord Alfred Douglass were lunching in the same cafe. The defendant upon that secasion shook hands with both Mr. Wilde and his son, and the witness invited the Marquis to join them.

THE LETTER WITHDRAWN.

At this stage of the proceedings counsel for Mr. Wilde handed him a letter, and the At this stage of the proceedings counsel for Mr. Wilde handed him a letter, and the witness was asked if such a document had been placed in his hands by Lord Alfred Douglass shortly afterwards. The magistrate here remarked that he thought this document should not be put in evidence. Mr. Carson, counsel for the Marquis, interposed, saying that he did not object to the letter being put in evidence. On the contrary, he preferred that it should be brought before the court, as he wished to show the Marquis was acting in the interest of his son. To this Mr. Newton said that he could not then enter into that question. Mr. Carson objected to this, and asked that the document be put in evidence, in order that the matter might be investigated in the fullest manner possible. Counsel for Mr. Wilde said it was not intended that the letter should be read in court, as the names of excellent personages were mentioned, and he did not think it right that their names should transpire. Counsel also explained that the mysterious letter was introduced with the view of charging the Marquis of Queensberry with additional libels, but as Mr. Newton insisted that in that case the letter should be read in court, counsel for the plaintif withdrew the letter.

THE MARQUIS HELD.

Mr. Carter then crosssexamined the witness in regard to his acquaintance with Lord Alfred Douglass, saying that he wished to show that the object of the Marquis was to end the acquaintance of his son with the plaintiff. The magistrate said he considered this evidence to be a plea of justification, and did not allow Mr. Carson to proceed. The Marquis of Queensberry was then asked if he had anything to say, whereupon he arose and declared that he wrote the card. "simply to bring matters to a head and to save my son." He added, "I abide ly what I wrote."

The Marquis was then formally committed for trial, bail being allowed in ft,500.

A PISTOL IN HER APRON.

The Story of a Brave South Carolina Girl's Defense.

pecial to The Post-Dispatch.
CENTRAL, S. C., March 9.—The story of a brave girl's defense near Woodruff was told here to-day. Yesterday a daughter of Mr. J. A. Gentry, who lives near Woodruft, was at home alone when a strange negro appeared who was evidently a tramp, and coming to the door started to enter. Miss Gentry, who is a brave girl, supposing something was wrong, put a pistol in the pocket of her apron and confronted the negro. She asked him what he wanted. He replied by inquiring if any of the family were at home. She said she was alone and all the men folks were away. "Then I will come in and warm myself," was the reply. The young lady told him that he should do nothing of the kind. The negro insisted and became quite bold. At this time Miss Gentry jerked out her pistol and pointed it at the intruder and told him if he did not make tracks down the road in short order she would bore a hole through him. The cowardly scoundrel saw that the brave girl meant business and beat a hasty retreat as her bullets fied after him. When her father returned the young lady reported the matter and a party was at once organized to make a search for the negro, but they haven't found him at last accounts. If he falls into their hands there will undoubtedly be a lynching bee. Mr. J. A. Gentry, who lives near Woodruff

Special to The Post-Dispatch. affray occurred on the ferry boat here this afternoon between Patrick Burton and Benjamin Nance on the one side and Robert Robertson on the other. Robertson was knocked down, shot in the head and badly beaten. The trouble originated out of a charge made against Burton in which it was alleged he had made proposals of an insulting nature to Mrs. Robertson, who is a niece of his and granddaughter of Mr. Nance. The prominence of all the parties concerned, Nance being a banker of New Franklin, and the others wealthy farmers of Howard County, makes the affair the topic of conversation here. A warrant was sworn out charging Nance and Burton with felonous assault and they were placed under a $1,500 bond to appear for trial March 15. It is predicted that the end is not yet, as all are determined men. jamin Nance on the one side and Robert

HI HENRY WAS A DISAPPOINTMENT.

The Half-Breed Ran Third at New Orleans.

LONG DELAY AT THE POST.

Brevity Furnishes a Surprise in the First and a Good Thing Turned Up in Nell Flaherty.

special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 9.—With beautiful balmy weather and an improved programme the sport at the Crescent City Jockey Club was very good to-day. The track had dried out considerably, and while not fast was in good enough condition to prevent the races being run in Indian file. The feature of the card was the six-furlong handicap, which brought out some of the best horses at the track. The bet-ting was the heaviest of the afternoon, and the big half-breed Hi Henry, though carrying the top impost of 125 pounds, was the best fancied of the lot, although there was but little to choose in the betting be-tween him, Beverly, Marshall and Bird-catcher.

tween him, Beverly, Marshall and Bird-catcher.

There was a long delay at the post, which, in all probability, ruined Hi Henry's chances, as he was out in nearly every break. When the flag finally fell Hi Henry rushed into the lead with Beverly within a length of him. Birdcatcher and Marshall laying withing striking distance. On the far turn Hogan took Hi Henry wide to avoid the deep going and Beverly getting the path next the inner rail, gained an advantage which sent him to the front. When they straightened out for home all began to drive hard and in an exciting finish Beverly won by a scant length from Marshall, who was a similar distance in front of Hi Henry and Birdcatcher. The time, 1:17%, was very fast for the track, the quarter being run in 24% seconds and the half in 50 seconds flat.

The opening event, a dash of six furlongs, turnished a big surprise. Darwin Wedgewood, on his good race a few days ago, was installed favorite, but after leading to the stretch he quit badly and Brevity, an outsider, came along and won in clever shape from Stark.

One of those periodical good things from

The seast trouble by four lengths with her head up in the air.

The seven-furlong dash had seemingly an evenly-balanced field, but the result of the race proved otherwise. The winner turned up in Robert Latta. He was badly beaten a few days ago, but to-day the "dope" was in him and he won all the way. Ixion for the place money from Chimes by a neck. The closing event of the day was an easy thing for the favorite, Ed Brown. Midgely sent him to the front at the start, and there was but little doubt as to the result after the first quarter had been run. He won by two lengths, while Alibi was twice that far in front of Mezzotint for second money. The summaries:

Miss Lyon Defeats Ethelleah in the 2-Year-old Race.

The first 2-year-old race of the year was run at East St. Louis yesterday afternoon. It was first on the card, and had seven entries, all starting. Feast, a bay filly by Rossington—Famine, was favorite at even money, with Ethelieah, a chestnut filly by Farandole—Option, second choice at 3 to 1. A very poor start was made, Feast and Ethel May being left at the post. Miss Lyon, a brown filly by Lepanto—Lady Lyon, won in a drive by half a length from Ethelieah, in good time.

The second race, which was reduced by Soratches to five starters, was entirely between Censor and Pat Tucker. The latter led almost to the wire and should have won, but Van Camp was careless, and allowed Censor to steal up and take the race by a very small margin.

"No appeal from referee's decision will be considered unless made within one week of date of meet." ssues the following notice to racing men

tainment.

The success of the Pastime Athletic Club's yele show to be held at the club house, Vandeventer avenue and Morgan street, on the afternoons and evenings of March 23 and 25 afternoons and evenings of March 23 and 25 gives every promise to far-exceed in point of attendance, number and volume of displays the most sanguine expectations of those in charge. All the latest efforts of the manufacturers of bicycles, tires and sundries will have representation. A number of novelties will be shown, among which may be mentioned a double tube pneumatic tire so arranged that in case of puncture, the inner or air tube may be permanently repaired without removing same from the outer dasing. The manner in which this tube is made, is such that the air tube may also be remle, is such that the air tube may also be remle, is such that the air tube may also be remle, in the such that the six tube is made sires, but this is not necessary except in case sires, but this is not necessary except in the case sires, but this is not necessary except in case sires, but this is not necessary except in case sires, but this is not necessary except in case sires, but this is not necessary except in the case sires, but this is not necessary except in the case of large cuts.

The will also be shown a bloycle coupler for joining two single wheels, either two adders drop frames, diamond frames or one of each. The different which may be coupled # without alteration of the coupler. The coupler yokes two wheels side by side so that the steering is in unison. The distance between the wheels can be varied according to circumstances or desire of the riders. One of the many special points of merit is that the coupler adjusts itself to uneven roads, thereby causing no strain to the frames of the bicycles so connected. The coupling rods and arms are made of tubing, such as is used in the construction of bicycles, which makes the device very strong and adds comparatively small weight to each wheel. Mr. J. W. Bowman, who has the Pastime cycle show in charge, has called a meeting of the dealers to be held at the P. A. C., club house at $ p. m. Monday, March 11. All dealers are requested to attend.

THE CUP DEFENDER.

John Herreshoff Explains the Policy of Strict Secrecy.

Written for the Post-Dispatch.

BRISTOL, R. I., March 3.—John B. Hereshoff, the head of the shipbuilding establishment, talked for the first time this season to your correspondent and explained the policy of silence the firm follows regarding the new cup defender.

"We are acting under orders," said he, "we are engaged by some New York men to build a yacht on which the eyes of the country and indeed the world generally will rest. So far as we are concerned we would willingly silow the papers to know every step of our work. The press has always been kind and appreciative, and we understand the more information we give out the more advertising our company would receive. Our clients seal our mouths. They wish every detail suppressed, at least until the yach building on the Clyde is constructed past the stage of alterations of a material nature. There is too much at stake, national honor, money, and no end of personal pride and responsibility. The Scotch builders do not allow any but trusted workmen to see their boat, and the press suppressess any intelligence lest it give aid to us on this side of the water. There will be numerous features attached to our boat which can not be safely disclosed. We must guard them. Our friends on the other side have been keen to profit by our advances in yacht building, and will selse any points that are useful. The syndicate say absolute scoreay, and so we place guards on our works and have a great deal of trouble to insure the privacy our clients demand."

From a reliable source in town the present status of the new yacht is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.-By next Saturday night the Belmont-Morgan syndi Saturday hight the Beimont-Morgan syndr-cate will have paid into the United States Treasury over $10,000,000 in imported gold. The amount from abroad which the gov-ernment has the right to claim under the contract is not to exceed 300,000 ounces per month. This is equivalent to $5,580,000. The month. This is equivalent to $5,50,000. The syndicate will have thus far deposited nearly two months' supply of foreign gold within five weeks from signing the contract. This will give them seven weeks leeway before another $00,000 ounces of imported coin can be demanded.

The government has shown no disp coin can be demanded.

The government has shown no disposition to push the contract. As a matter of fact, the syndicate has thus far been several million dollars better than its word. It has deposited nearly $40,00,000 on domestic account, taking legal tenders for the balance in place of bond certificates. Financiers both here and abroad, however, recognize the difficulties which lie before the syndicate in the future. So far as the foreign gold is concerned the London houses of Morgan & Co. and the Rothschilds could spare the whole amount from their vaults in a week's notice and not cause a ripple in the market.

It is another obligation to the contract which causes apprehension. Belmont and Morgan have bound themselves not merely to protect the gold reserve, but to prevent the exportation of gold they must absolutely govern the agroration of gold they must absolutely govern trade conditions. The fact is noted that for the months of February, March, April, May, June and July the excess of gold exports from the United States for the last four years has been as follows: 183, 572, 300,000; 1862, 343, 300,000; 1863, 344, 300,000; 1864, 372, 100,000. Undeutsedly the arror movement would be in active operation at the present time were not these two powerful banking houses bearing the exchange market by freely off american selection of the syndicate and each method as undoubtedly used. From a reliable source in town the present status of the new yacht is as follows: The lead keel, shaped like a huse fish, is finished. The keel is about 20 fet in length and about 5 ft deep at the deepest point. The greatest quantity of lead is forward, so the boat will be quick in stays. Workmen have planed the surface of the lead and crilled holes for the boits to held it to the hull proper. The boits will have to be strong, as there are seventy tons of lead in the keel. ## AN ARTFUL DODGER.

Why a Newspaper Illustrator Must Go to the Penitentiary.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 9.—After dodging the officers for years, John A. Heitz, a newspaper artist, was arrested to-day and will be taken back to Kentucky to serve four years and a half in the Frankfort Penitentiary, from which he escaped in 1850. In the meantime he had served a sentence for another crime committed in Rochester,

In the meantime he had served a sentence for another crime committed in Rochester, N. Y.

There was a reward of $500 on his head. It was discovered that Heitz lived with his father in Allegheny and worked in Pittsburg. Heitz made no attempt at escape. All he asked was that they make no fuss about it. Later he admitted that he was an escaped convict. He wore eyeglasses and one of the mildest looks that ever a man possessed. His habits were most correct and there was never any indications that he was other than what he pretended to be.

He was known in Louisville as the "Dude Burglar," and worked as a tailor, reporter, and artist. On Feb. 14, 1889, he burglarized a music store in Louisville, and right after that came a succession of roberies, all of which were traced to him. He was known there as John A. Heine. There were four charges of burglary against him and he was convicted and sentenced to two terms of three years each on two charges, and the others were held over. He now owes the State of Kentucky four and a half years. He was taken to the penitentiary at Frankfort, and on April 15, 1890, he escaped by scaling the wall. Bloodhounds were put on his track and he was recaptured on the 19th of the same month. His next attempt to escape was on Sept. 3, 1890. He climbed the wall in broad daylight and that time got away. In 1892 he stole a tray of diamonds in Wheeler & Wilson's pawn shop in Rochester, N. Y., and was captured. For that he was given three years in Elmira.

Indian Agent Harper had been notified from Washington that the troops were held in readiness at Walla Walla, but kept his counsel, saying nothing until about the time for the arrival of the train, when he gave out the information that he had requested the aid of the troops. He stated the troops may be necessary to protect the agency and whites on the reservation. Affairs have been disturbed on the reservation for some weeks on account of the disagreements of the officials and the Indians.

Expect No Patents. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—Secretary Smith has determined that no more patents for land granted the subsidized railroads shall be issued until there has been a settlement of the debt due the Government from these roads. He says he thinks it just that no more patents should be granted when the roads owe the Government such large sums. It has been stated that a suit for mandamus to compel the Secretary to continue issuing patents will be brought by the railroads. When this was suggested to Secretary Smith to-day he said it would be time enough to begin work on the patents when the courts granted such mandamus. The lands affected are within the grants to the Union and Central Pacific between Omaha and Sacramento. It is also thought the lands within the grant to the Oregon and California road will be affected, as it is operated as part of the Central Pacific system.

LOOKS LIKE A DEAD LETTER. The So-Called Free Zone May Continue to Be Free.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—The Treasury Department sent out telegrams esterday notifying collectors of customs of the suspension of the privilege of shipment of goods in bond across the United States into the Mexican free zone. It is now discovered that the suspension will have little effect. Shippers may under section 3,000 of the Revised Statutes withdraw goods after examination in transit from one warehouse and send them under bond to a warehouse in El Paso, for instance, and then export them into the free zone by giving a bond to exhibit a bill of lading, showing that they have been exported, Only in case the seals are found to have been broken in transit from one warehouse to the other can the Government exact duty on the goods. This will cause some delay, but will not prevent the passage of goods through the United States. It was due to an oversight that further restriction was not put around the transhipment of goods under section 3,000. he suspension of the privilege of ship ther restriction was not put around the ranshipment of goods under section 3,000.

CRONIN FAVORS IT.

He Pledges Himself to Push the Fender Bill in the House.

Jim Cronin, Chairman of the House of Delegates Committee on Railroads, stated last evening that he believed the fender bill will be passed. "I am in favor of the bill," said the big representative of the First Ward. "I am strongly in favor of making the street railroads adopt some means of preventing the slaughter of innocent people. The bill got its first reading Friday evening, when it was sent to the House from the Council. As soon as it gets a second reading Tuesday night it will be referred to the Committee on Railroads. I will call a meeting of the committee immediately and I am sure that, after the committee and House have looked into the matter the bill will be put through. The committee has not yet had the bill before it and it has not been discussed. We did not know what shape the ordinance would be in until about a week ago, when the Council amended it and sent it to engressment.

"I want to say, too, that I am in favor of anything the Post-Dispatch is pushing. The Post-Dispatch has always been fair to me and it has the good of the people at heart.
"The Council might have sent it to us a little sooner. Those fellows seem to think we are all chumps over this side, and that all we have to do is to pass their bills right away. They can keep a bill all winter and want us to dispose of it in two or three meetings.

meetings.

"Still, we want the fender bill. My constituents want it. I give you my word, I'll push this bill through as soon as possible. That is. I'll do all I can for At. I will try to get it considered and you'd on in two

WILL MEET THE RATES.

The Illinois Central and Burlington to made yesterday by the Chicago Great Western from St. Louis to points in the East. This leaves the remaining lines having interests in that territory no recourse but to follow the example of the Illinois Central and the Burlington.

The difference in opinion between Chairman Caldwell and the Alton road regarding the application of the Canadian Pacific differentials will likely remain in statu quo until after the general meeting of the Western lines on Wednesday of next week.

Chairman Caldwell did not know until today that the Alton was expecting an opinion from him, thinking that the ruling he made against the Alton in the meeting sufficiently defined his ideas upon the matter.

The Central Traffic Board of Arbitration on differentials, which began its meeting yesterday, finished its work to-day, although no decision will be made before the latter part of next week at the earliest. The stronger lines are much afraid that the application of differentials on theatrical and party business, as desired by the smaller lines, will take from them the larger portion of the business incident to several large meetings in the East during the coming summer.

summer. Jarnings of the Chicago, Milwaukes & St. ul for the first week of March were $65, a decrease of $5,566 from the correspond-week of last year.

A NEW POSTAGE STAMP. One Which May Be Used in Several Dif-ferent Countries.

The German Minister of Poets has designed an international postage stamp, and is about to place a proposition before certain European countries relative to its general adoption. The stamp so designed is to contain the names of all countries in which its postal value is recognized, together with a table showing its money value in each of such countries. There is no doubt that a stamp of this description would be a boon to all who carry on any foreign correspondence, because of the great difficulty which prevails at present in enclosing a stamp for a rapiy letter from a foreign country.

MASCOUTAH, Ill., March to the great wheat crop in this, the great who rowing section of Illinois, is in fine of ition and shows no sign of damage from severe winter weather that has ailed during the past three months, tand is excellent and the growing as a fine appearance. The acreage as af fall was fully up to the average.

An interesting proposition is advanced by John J. McCann, senior member of the MocCann-Evans Reality Company, for the extension eastward of Forest Park Boulevard.

Mr. McCann has evidently gone over the matter thoughtfully as is shown by the facts and figures be presents in backing up his project. Mr. McCann says:

"Market street, sixty feet wide, runs in an air line due west from the Mississippi passing the Court House, City Hail and Union Bitation, straight to Jferson avenue, where it diverges at an angle of 20 degrees south into Laclede avenue and the mention of Laclede avenue and the feet work of the sixting the court of the project of the sixting to the sixting that it is a sixty of the sixty of Philanthropical Effort to Improve the Condition of Working Men's Homes.

The recent report of the Labor Commissioner which visited Europe to inspect the dwellings occupied by the working men has inspired a client of A. E. Weiss & Co. with a plan to provide for the workingmen obtaining desirable houses. The yards will be divided by hedge fences and ornamented with shade trees. All the

of St. Louis homes which are far superior to the ones now occupied by them.

At the World's Fair a plan of the homes erected by the Social and Economic Sciences Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary of Philadelphia was exhibited. It gave an idea of what had been done in the East to supply homes which can be either sold or rented for comparitively small amounts.

The St. Louis plan is to arect hemse that are far superior to those in Philadelphia and rent them at the rate of $12 to $15 per month.

So, in the afternoon, accompanied by Deputy United States Marshal Ed Brennan and Deputy Collector Bauer, he proceeded to Luxemburg, and knocked at the door of Weinerth's home. Weinerth came to the door and, being told Cromwell inquired of Weinerth if he had Cromwell inquired of Weinerth if he had a still in the house, and the latter surprised the party by answering that he had. He conducted them to the cellar and showed them there a still large enough to handle a twenty-five-gallon run. They asked Weinerth what he used it for, and he said for making sassafras, he being an analytical chemist. Cromwell asked him if he ever made moonshine whisky, and he answered that he never did. Cromwell put his nose to two barrels at hand, and detected the odor of whisky. Weinerth attempted to explain this circumstance by saying that whisky had formerly been kept in the barrel. rel.

Notwithstanding the explanation, the officers took Weinerth into custody. He was brought to the Federal Building, and his hearing was set for next Tuesday, before United States Commissioner Gray.

Signs of Improvement Visible in the Rop-kinsville Market.

the week just closed the condition of the Hopkinsville tobacco market was much more promising than it has been for some time past, especially as to the quality of the weed offered and the prices that much of the finer grades commanded. Upon all grades of the weed there was a slight advance, and a ready demand for goods of the better types, which still continue scarce, for the reason that the weather has for weeks been so unfavorable for prising and the reads over which the stuff comes to market are almost impassable. The bidding was livelier than at any time yet this season, and more interest shown in the sales. The weather is so variable that it has been almost impossible much of the time for planters to get any part of their grope stripped and prised and delivered, and then many of the offerings are still very wet and in high cure, a riost objectionable condition for the weed, and one that makes it sell low just now, when even the stemmerica, their principal patrons, are also and cautious in making their

Louis Weinerth of Luxemburg Ar- Timothy Stevens and His Sons Gave Him a Rough Reception.

Hank Smith, a negro burglar, was so badly beaten by Timothy Stevens and his two sons, for entering their home, at 306 Lami street, early yesterday morning, that Lami street, early yesterday morning, that he is on a cot at the City Hospital suffering from a fractured skull and many body bruises. At 1:40 a. m. he cut a shutter on the kitchen window, raised the sash and entered. Mrs. Stevens, who has a fractured leg and was awake, heard Smith's footsteps and saw him peer into the room where she and her husband were asleep. She awakened her husband and he made for Smith. The men fought desperately, and the negro was getting the better of Stevens when the latter's two sons appeared and attacked Smith. He huried three lamps at the young men, but did not hit them. Aithough Smith kicked and used his fists and teeth, he was floored. He continued to fight, and was rendered helpless by blows. Mr. Stevens and his sons bound him hand and foot and called the police. He was sent to the City Hospital, and several new knives taken from him. During the fight he tried to draw one of these weapons. Smith is a roustabout, and he arrived from New Orleans a few days age. He said he was looking for a man when he entered Stevens' house.

"It is slower work, of course," said Matron Owens, in discussing this point. "but you feel so much more satisfied as to a child's future when a home is found for it in this way than when it is merely taken out to become a servant. And you would be surprised to know how many people there are who are anxious to adopt children. We have very little trouble in placing those coming to us. From where do the children come? Why, from everywhere, but especially from the slums. We try to train them to a certain extent here, and to soften them into gentle and obedient children. There is but little attempt at schooling, however, The children arise at 70 clock, and breakfast is ready at 7:30. At 9 o'clock we have prayers, and then until luncheon, between 11:30 and 12, the children play. In the afternoon at 4 they gather in the reception room down stairs and sing hymns and songs. Supper comes at 5, and the children are put to bed from 7:30 to 3. "We have been very successful with our children, and I tell you some of them were about as bad as slum children can be made, but they all seem to be amenable to affectionate and yet firm treatment. Of the thirty-three children we have now, the youngest is 2 months old and the eidest 14 years. We do not like to receive children very young, but what can you do if they are abandoned? The plan of the home is not at all on the foundling hospital line. Nor is it on that of the creche, although we have now a child whose mother places it here during the day while she is at work, and comes for it at night. But this is an exception. The only requisite necessary, however, to gain admission for a child is out the visit.

They were encountered on the stairs and in the halls; they peoped in through the half-open office door as the visitors talked with the matron in constructively great secusion; one of them in fact refused utterly to surrender that lady unprotected to the whole outfit, barring bables in the cradle, rallied in force in the down-stairs waiting-room and took that long contemplative stare at the intruders, possible only to children and English people.

The artist got even with them by making sketches right before their faces, but the reportorial element of the invasion was at their mercy.

the fact that it is homeless, and that with-out our help it would be surrendered to suf-fering or evil surroundings.

A GROUP OF THE WAIFS.

'How are the society and the home maintained? By voluntary subscriptions alone, and we have no regular system of soliciting contributions nor no regular channel of help. People give clothing, shoes and stockings, bedding, money, anything they can, and we always find a use for it. We manage to pull through someway, and the children age provided for until we find a permanent and good home for them. Why do they all call me grandma? Well, they took to it themselves, because I am old and white-haired, and I like to have them do it. One of the board of visitors asked me why I didn't train them to call me Mrs. Owens, but, pshaw! wouldn't that seem rather coldr. Calling me grandma makes them feel more at home, I reckon. No, we don't dress them uniformly, because we strive to do away with the institutional idea, and also we utilize whatever garments are given us. Take it all in all, the plan of the society is a very simple one. It is simply to rescue poor children and find good homes for them. That's the whole thing in a nutshell."

There can be no doubt that the children received at the St. Louis Home are helpless walfs. One going there recently was antered by his sponsor under the name of Grover Cleveland, and is known now to hid playmates as Grover. The child was poweres. of recognition.

"We wish to see the matron of the Home," said one of the visitors, and the old lady nodded her snowy head and said that she was the matron.

Then for an hour or more an interested study was made of an interesting place.
The old homestead wherein the Children's Home Society of Missouri has its St. Louis headquarters is simply a family residence of thirteen rooms, including kitchen, laundry, office, etc., and as there are now thirty-three children being taken care of at the Home it may be imagined that children were very numerously in evidence throughout the visit.

They were engountered on the stairs and playmates as Grover. The child was powerless.

Mention has already been made of the sturdy little fellow who stuck so close to "Grandma" Owens during the visit of the Sunday Post-Dispatch artist and reporter to the home. It was amusing to see him toddle around everywhere she went, fielding to her hand, or, when it was temporarily withdrawn, to her apron. But, somehow, the amusing phase of his action seemed to die out of sight when the visitors learned that the little tad was to leave the home the following day, and that this was his way of showing his affection for the matron who had been good to him. The little fellow's name is Ernest Dunfield, and a family living somewhere down the river has made arrangements to adopt him and give him a home.

After the entire outil of children, rallying on one another in a hollow square, had surveyed the visitors on this occasion, and apparently realized that their own lives were not in danger, they sang two or three songs by way of atoning for their initial suspicion. The visitors left while they were atill singing—not because the children were singing, but because their own time was up. And the youngsters, one and all, accomplished the great concert feat of smiling brightly at the audience without missing a note. They seemed happy and not at all worried as to their future.

Bills at the Other Local Play-Hot and Gossip of the Stage Here and Abroad.

There were evidences at the theaters last week that popular caprice is still as hard to judge as ever it was, and that no player can always be sure that he or she has a lasting hold on public favor. Two professionals, who a few years ago were received with open arms, met last week with a de-cided "frost." They were Rose Coghlan and Amelia Glover, widely differing in their styles of art, and yet both at one time con-sidered premieres.

styles of art, and yet both at one time considered premieres.

The difficulty with Miss Coghlan seemed to be that her new play did not catch the public. There was nothing about "The Modern Duchess" to appeal either to the sense of sympathy or of art in the great masses on the one hand or the "cultivated" few on the other; and so Miss Coghlan played to empty seats. There was a time when the name of Rose Coghlan was sufficient to fill a house, but this day has gone by with her, as it is rapidly going by with others. Theater-goers are beginning to care less for the actor and more for the play, and who will say that this is not a good thing?

The cause of poor Amelia Glover's waning popularity lies in the fact, as explained before in these columns, that her health is broken, and the life of her step is gone. Misfortune and grief have tied leaden weights to her once nimble feet, and until she has again recovered her wonted spirits she will never dance as she used to.

Eddie Foy, the inimitable husky-voiced reights to her once nimble feet, and until he has again recovered her wonted spirits he will never dance as she used to. Eddie Foy, the inimitable husky-voiced iddie, did all the business he could play to, nd he deserved it. "Off the Earth" is not a lighly artistic melange, and no one ever laimed this for it. Its sole purpose is to muse people, and it accomplishes this with minent success.

With the exception of business at the irand the managers had no cause for complaint, and if the average is as good this reek the Lenten devotees may easily be pared.

Robin Hood Company

Robin Hood Company.

Barnaby McDonald's Robin Hood Opera Company will appear at the Olympic this week in De Koven and Smith's now famous work "Robin Hood." This opera has been the most successful of the great number which have been put upon the large since "Erminie." The music of it is especially delightful. The Robin Hood Company comprises sixty voices and a special orchestra is carried. While among the principals there are no creat operatic stars, here are a number of them who possess fine voices and unto whom fame is yet to come. Some of the eading artists are Greta Risley, Mary Palmer, Maud Ulmer, Agnes Stone, Louis Casavant, James Nickolds, Ross David, Charles Landie, R. E. Graham, Phillips limes and Helen Rainsley.

James A. Herne in "Shore Acres."

At the Grand Opera House this evening lovers of refined stage art will have an opportunity of witnessing the successful American comedy-drama "Shore Acres" with the author, James A. Herne, in his original creation of Nathaniel Berry. This play was given all last year at Daly's Theater, New York, and the year previous at the Boston Museum. Its success has been universally acknowledged.

The story of "Shore Acres" is a simple one. Martin and Nathaniel Berry are two brothers who live on the Shore Acres farm at Berry, Me. They also look after the Berry light house. Martin is married and has a grown up daughter, Helen. Their home life is happy and uneventful until a neighbor, Josiah Blake, gets Martin interested in a land speculating scheme. Josiah Blake and Dr. Sam Warren are both in love with Helen, who favors the physician and elopes with him. There is a struggle in the

In the last act, which shows an interval of fifteen months, Martin learns that his scheme is a failure and he fears that he will lose the farm. Helen and Sam come home on a visit and are forgiven and Uncle Nathaniel saves the farm with his back pension money. There are nearly thirty characters and the comedy scenes are interesting and enjoyable.

It was Mr. Carte's intention to send a London company to America next season to play the opera, but Wilson's offer was such a generous one in its terms that this idea was abandoned and in a few days the papers assigning the rights to him were exnear Seville, in Spain, among a band of ladrones, and the second before an inn in the village of Denessa, on the river Sil. As an illustration of the immense amount of money pouring into the coffers of Messrs. Abbey, Schoeffel and Grau may be cited the first week of the two weeks' engagement at Mechanics' Hall in Boston, where the receipts reached the really amazing total of $81,000. It would be impossible to reach any such sum here at the scheduled prices, as not even Music Hall, large as it is, can compare in size with Boston's auditorium.

There have been vague hints thrown out in certain quarters that St. Louis would be rather slighted in the character of the operas presented here, but Mr. Gillette, the representative of the managers, declares that such a suspicion does Messrs. Abbey, Schoeffel and Grau an injustice. Mr. Gillette stated to a Post-Dispatch representative that not only would St. Louis not be slighted, but would be favored with the very best operas in the company's repertoire.

compètent professionals and amateurs. The bill now offered is one of the many excellent features in the Pope course of musical and dramatio numbers, which has been so successful during the current season, and added so materially in enhancing the name of St. Louis as a discriminating art center.

The coming attraction at the Grand is not limited to subscribers to the Pope course, although arrangements for their attendance have been made, but it is also at the complete disposal of the public, who, ever since the first announcement of the entertainment have been securing seats in advance at a most gratifying rate. To gainsay the impression that this is to be an amateur performance, the statement is in order that besides Mr. Pope's amply capable professional ability, the entire resources of the Grand Opera House are to be called into requisition. It will be in all respects a professional ability, the entire resources of the single state of the complete of the statement is in order that be single and the statement is not record as having given these ladies his most discriminating braise. In this connection it is proper so say that special scenery and costumes have been prepared for the event by the regular attaches of the Grand, and that the music incidental to the bill is in the usual competent hands.

The comedy itself is one of the best of its class, and for such an occasion as the one under consideration, could not have been more fittingly chosen. The dialogue is bright and catchy, the situations what might be called fetching, and the general tone of the piece will prove to be most acceptable. It has been in actual rehersal so long that it is ripe for portrayal even now, and the few added days will only serve to fuller insure a smooth, rounded parformance.

ed at Pope's.

As a curtain raiser for "Muldoon's Pionic," on St. Patrick's Day at Pope's Theater, Col. John D. Hopkins will give the first presentation of "The Joy that Kills," a comedy drama in one act, by Charles Alf. Williams, a local newspaper man. The little play deals with the fate of a moneylending miser whose graspins meanness has wrecked his home life. His daughter leaves, but is wooed by the man whom the father hates. The somberness of the miser's character serves as a foil to the comedy in which the daughter, her two suitors and the collector for the money-lender are the actors. The old man promises to give up the pursuit of the golden demon when he has accumulated a million deliars in cash. His remorseless clutch is upon the last shekel when relentiess fate crowns the accomplishment of his purpose with the happiness of his daughter, the success of his enemy and to him brings "the Joy that kills,"

The Lindell Railway Company's Great Privileges.

THIRTY-THREE MILES TRACK

And the Lindell Only Pays $3,000 a Year Upon Gross Receipts Amounting to $800,000.

The question of the desirability of the selling of valuable municipal franchises to the highest bidder is again to the front, nrough the haggling in the Council over ne ordinance recently introduced author-ring the Lindell Railway Company to extend its lines through the southeastern cor-ner of, and along the south line of, Forest Park to the city limits, In the bill as introduced the compensation provided for the franchise was fixed as follows: One the franchise was fixed as follows; One thousand a year from 1896 to 1890; $3,000 a year from 1900 to 1810; $6,000 a year from 1910 to 1920; $10,000 a year from 1920 to 1920. Councilman Anderson objected to this as excessive, and offered a substitute, upon which the general expression as to the value of such franchises followed, as has already hear recorded.

The total number of passengers patronizing this gigantic system in 1894 was 17,425,-271. This means an annual gross income of nearly $800,000, allowing for one-tenth of the above number of passengers being children carried for half fare.

This vast business involves a question of privileges and property rights possible only under franchises granted to the company enjoying them by the city of St. Louis. That these concessions are, have always been, and will continue to be, extremely valuable, is beyond dispute. The extent to which the traffic of the Lindell company has already grown is shown by the figures given. The future growth of the Lindell company's traffic is limited only by the growth of the city, so large a portion of whose territory the Lindell tracks cover.

third street and King's Highway by electric power." No money consideration to the city.

The eighth franchise was granted in City Ordinance 15,685, approved April 4, 1889. This authorizes the Lindell Railway Company "to extend its tracks from the present tracks at Fairfax avenue and Vandeventer avenue on, over, through and along certain streets, it its present tracks on Vandeventer and Finney avenue." Here comes mention of the first money consideration to the city. In consideration of these privileges the Lindell Railway Company agreed to pay into the city treasury the sum of $1,000 on the ist of April, 1899, and a like sum on the first day of each year thereafter until and including the year 1914.

The ninth franchise was granted in city ordinance 15,445, approved Feb. 20, 1890. This ordinance authorized the Lindell Railway Co. "to operate and use certain streets (Taylor avenue south to Delmar) and to operate its lines of railroad by electric and horse power." In consideration of these privileges the Lindell Railway Co. was required to pay into the City Treasury the sum of $25,000, to be expended in enlarging the lake in Forest Park when such work should be authorized by city ordinance; to construct a passenger waiting-room and depot in Forest Park to cost not less than $25,000, and to-pay into the City Treasury, beginning Jan. 1, 1891, the sum of $1,000 and the further sum of $1,000 a year until March 14, 1914.

The tenth franchise is found in City Ordinance 15,602, approved April 4, 1890. This authorises the Lindell Railway Co. in changing its motive power, to place its poles in the center of the streets. No money con-

The eleventh franchise was granted in City Ordnance 15,606, approved April 4, 1820. This authorises the Lindell Railway Co. "to construct, operate and maintain" a double-track passenger railroad on Vandeventer avenue, extending north and south," etc. In consideration of this privilege the Lindell Railway Co. obligated itself to pay into the City Treasury the sum of $1,000 on the first day of January of each year, the payments to begin after the expiration of five years from the date of the acceptance of the ordinance.

from the date of the acceptance of dinance.

The twelfth franchise is contained in City Ordinance 16,067, approved April 3, 1891. This authorizes the Lindell Railway Co. "to extend its tracks on Page, Goodfellow and Delmar avenues." No money consideration to the city.

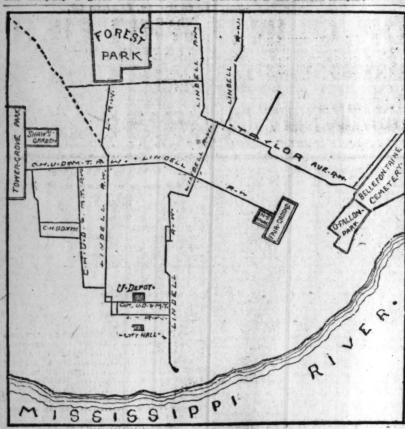

This completes the franchise record of the Lindell Railway Co. as shown by the books of the City Register's office.

of the City Register's office.

Under the contracts entered into, therefore, will be found the record of whatever increase of the city's revenue may have resulted from the valuable privileges granted to the Lindell, upon which that road has built up a traffic business aggregating a gross income of nearly $800,000 per year.

According to the ordinances referred to, the City Treasury was until Jan. 1, 1895, in receipt of the magnificent sum total of $1,000 per annum from the franchises which the city had granted to the Lindell company, and had benefitted by this princely income since Jan. 1, 1891. Beginning Jan. 1, 1895, this income was further augmented by the annual sum of $1,000 additional, to be paid annually. Beginning April 1, 1899, another $1,000 per year will be added to this revenue from the Lindell company, continuing to and including the year 1914.

This makes a total income to the city from Lindell Railway franchises of $2,000 per year. Beyond this revenue, according to the figures of the City Register's office, the City of St. Louis derives nothing for its franchises to the Lindell company.

The fourth franchise was granted in City Ordinance 11,237, approved Jan. 7, 1890. This ordinance authorizes the Lindell Railway Company "to extend its tracks to the intersection of Hogan avenue and Vandeventer avenue." No money consideration was releived by the city for this franchise. The fifth franchise is found in City Ordinance 11,957, approved March 18, 1882. This authorizes the Lindell Railway Company "to lay a track on Grand avenue, between Delmar avenue and Morgan street." No money consideration received by the city. The sixth franchise was conferred in City Ordinance 13,879, approved Feb. 11, 1881. This authorized the Lindell Railway Company to alter its railroad and change its motive power." No money consideration to the city.

$500,000 in 1894, it would be reasonable to suppose that the city of St. Louis, which granted the valuable franchises making such a business possible, should have found to own revenue proportionately increased by the sale of those franchises.

This supposition is so far wrong, however, that a statement of the franchises held by the Lindell Railway Co. and of the revenue derived therefrom by the city of St. Louis will prove astounding to the general public.

The books of the office of the City Register of St. Louis show that the franchises under which the Lindell Railway Co. is operating are twelve in number.

The first of these is contained in city ordinance 6,009, approved Feb. 1, 1867. It authorizes the Lindell Railway Co. to construct a line "along certain streets in the city received no consideration.

The Century accepted her first offering: "A No Account Creole," and other periodicals, including the Atlantic, welcomed her work as something original and not conventional. "Desiree's Baby" and "in and Out of Old Natchitoches," included in the volume called "Bayou Folk," published by Houghton Mifflin & Co., are masterpieces of art and feeling, unsurpassed by any American writer in strength, with delicacy of touch, and in fine rendering of the subtler shades of human emotion. This book has enjoyed a wide sale in all parts of the country, being instantly recognized, both by critics and the reading public as literature of a very high rank. A second volume, to include most of the stories which have appeared in the magazines since "Bayou Folk" was published, is promised for the near future. The scene of most of her stories is Natchitoches Parish, Louisiana, where she lived for many years. Frederick Harrison says in the March Forum: "Charlotte Bronte painted not the world, hardly a corner of the world, but the very soul of one proud and loving girl. That is enough; we need ask no more. It was done with consummate power. We feel that we know her life, from ill-used childhood to her proud matronhood; we know her home, her school, her professional duties, her loves and hates, her agonies and joys, with that intense familiarity and certainty of vision with which our own personal memories are graven on our brain. With all its faults, its martowness of range, its occasional extravagances, 'Jane Eyre' will long be remembered as one of the most creative influences of the Victorian literature, one of the most poetic pieces of English romance and among the most vivid masterpleces in the rare order of literary 'Confessions.'" "Confessions."

The following story has been told of other noted professors, but a writer in the New York Press vouches for it as belonging to the late John Stuart Blackle, the great professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh.

One day he was absent, and left on the blackboard the chalked notice: "Prof. Blackle will not meet his classes to-day."

A student rubbed out the "c," so that the notice read: "Prof. Blackle will not meet his lasses to-day."

So it stood next morning when the Professor, returning to duty, read it, amid the titters of his big junior class. Without saying a word, and keeping his face straight and calm, the old Professor rubbed out the "!," and the legend ran: "Prof. Blackle will not meet his asses to-day."

Deputy Grand Master Workman Bradley accompanied the Grand Master Workman on this tour.

After a stay of fifteen days overhauling, we were again under way, this time bound for Five Fathom Bank, about twenty miles off the Delaware Coast. The ice and weather prevented us going to sea that night, so we anchored in Hampton Roads, and at $ a. m. Friday, Feb. 22. we started out to sea. The large ice floes floating into Hampton Roads from the sea made it such slow work that we returned to Norfolk. We started at daybreak for Fire Island, where our first wreck had been reported. We found it after a few hours' search in a blinding snow storm. The sunken schooner showed two spars above water. We steamed up to about 500 yards off the wreck and dropped anchor. Our whaleboat had been prepared with a supply of torpedoes and necessary articles for exploding them. The citizens voted affirmatively and guards were placed at all the outlets of the town. Passengers from Morley were the first victims. They had not been exposed to small pox, but that made no difference. By 1 20 clock the roads around town were crowded with wagons loaded with produce, all clamoring for admittance, but the orders were strict and the officers firm. No one was allowed to enter. ROSEBERRY NOT IMPROVING. HONEST AMBITION REWARDED

The Queen Uses Her Influence to Pre- From Humble Beginnings, They Atvent the Premier From Resigning.

LONDON, March 3.—Lord Roseberry's physician said to a friend in Parliament yesterday that in all his experience with in-fluenza he had never met a case of a young and strong man whose recuperative power is so deficient as the Premier's. Besides as so dencient as the Fremier's. Besides extracts from London papers sent you this morning, almost a week after the Post-Dispatch had exclusive information of his desire to resign official cares, the Liberal papers that are fully aware of the situation refrain from discussions. ness of the situation refrain from discussing it, lest a crisis might be precipitated. Should it, lest a crisis might be precipitated. Should he resign, dissolution is almost certain to follow, since the party would hardly venture on a second change of Premiers. Thus depends on the humor of a sick and despondent man whether the country is to be plunged into a general election.

I hear a queer story that the Queen has added her influence to Roseberry's friends, not because she has any sympathy with the permanence of the Liberal Government, but because dissolution would postpone and probably prevent altogether her visit to the Riviera. When Gladstone was forming his Givernment in 1882 the Queen was seriously criticised for staying even so far away from London as the Isle of Wight. The craze for company promoting which has of late years so strongly selzed of the British aristocracy has this week had two notable victims. Lord Sudeley, representative of probably two of the oldest families in the peerage, has been obliged to place on the market two estates which have been in the possession of his ancestors since the Saxon period. Sudeley, who is now nearly 60, began life wealthy and married a wealthy wife, but both fortunes have been swallowed up in ten years of company speculation. He was until recently a director in fifteen different companies, nearly all of which proved failures, and he has lost nearly half a million pounds in these undertakings. The other case is that of Lord Thurlow, a descendant of one of England's most famous Lord Chancellors. The Thurlow family is one of great antiquity in Norfolk, and the peer, who has now come to grief, was private secretary to. Bir Francis Bruce when he was Minister to Washington in 1866. He has since held minor offices in Liberal governments. His debts are $450,000, and he has offered a compromise of one-third that sum to his creditors. He lost his money in the same way as Lord Sudeley, but his cass has this week assumed a very ugly complexion. He admitted in bankruptcy proceedings the purchase of valuable jewelry that he afterwards pawned, and when pressed profes he resign, dissolution is almost certain to follow, since the party would hardly

At the same time we played out our wire until it reached the deck of the wreck; then we made the end of the line fast to the mast, a precaution taken to holst it out of the water if the detonator does not explode. Then we pulled away the length of our wires, a distance of 200 feet, and connected the wires with the firing board, turning the handle of the electric machine for a test to see if the circuit is complete.

the shooting of certain citizens at Washington Court House by Ohio troops under command of Col. Alonzo B. Colt, while defending a negro prisoner from being lynched, sustains Colt. Gov. McKinley has in-

The Governor in his indorsement of the The Governor in his indorsement of the finding of the Court of Inquiry says:

"The crime which was the pretext for the unlawful assemblage and the riotous conduct which followed, was revolting in the extreme, and merited, as it received the condemnation of law, the court and all good citizens. The crime, horrible as it was, was, however, no justification for the acts of lawlessness and violence which were permitted by those who in passion sought to add to one crime still another, and whose peace in duty as citizens was to preserve, not to break the peace of the country."

whose peace in duty as citizens was to preserve, not to break the peace of the country."

The Governor then outlines the affair at Washington Court House Oct. 17, in which the prisoner was being taken from the jail to the court room to enter a plea of guilty when the mob interfered. Having reached the court-room with the prisoner and he having been sentenced to twenty years, the full extent of the law, the officers of the County and the military remained there, besieged by the mob until the shooting followed, on account of an attempt of the mob to break into the building. "The unlawful assemblage," says the Governor, "neither heeded the warnings of the officers, nor of the citizens which were repeatedly given."

Mr. Byron Nugent is at present in Florida.

His brothers and Mr. F. C. Lake have charge of the business. It is no easy task to make a bank president out of yourself when you haven't a cent to start with, yet that is what Charles W. Bullen has done for himself. Forty years ago Mr. Bullen was born in Henderson, Ky. When 15 his folks moved to Louisville, and a year after young Charles Bullen left home to seek his fortune.

"I went from Louisville to Sedalia, Mo., in 1870." said Mr. Bullen, "and when I got there I didn't have a cent. That same day I got s. job in a stationery store, working for my board. After I had been working there a few weeks old Menta Thompson, who was President of the Central Missouri Savings Association, came in one day and said: "My boy, I'm going to take you in our bank," and a short time later he made good his promise.

said: 'My boy, I'm going to take you in our bank,' and a short time later he made good his promise.

"When I had been there over a year the cashier died and the teller was promoted cashier. Mr. Thompson came to me and said: 'Charlie, I would make you teller here if you only had a little more experience.' That remark is what made me a banker. He said this in such a kind, encouraging way that I said to myself. 'Well, Charlie, you'll be all right if you stick to it.' And I straightaway went to work to get enough experience to fit myself for the position of teller. Well, a new bank was organized shortly after that and I was made teller. Later on I was made cashier, and I held that position in the Citizens' National, the new Sedalia bank for over ten years. During this time I began to feel that there wasn't much chance for me to advance in the banking business in Sedalia, so I decided to get a position in St. Louis if possible. I came down here in April, 1833, and I went over to the Continental National Bank, on Fourth and Olive streets, and told the people there that I was from Sedalia, would like a place in their bank, and that if they could make room for me I felt sure that I the interval raised himself to the presidency of one of the largest tobacco firms in the country.

Col. Wetmore was born in the town of Shobonier, Fayette County, Ill., in 1845. He served in the army when quite young, and his father, who intended him for an army officer, had secured an appointment to West Point for him through Senator, Trumbuil. But when young Wetmore came home from the war, he told his father he would rather sell tobacco than drill a company, and he had his way.

"There used to be an old fellow named Martin," said Col. Wetmore, "who was in the tobacco business in St. Louis about the time of the war. He used to come out to Shobonier and sell tobacco to my father, who kept a general store there. I used to watch him as he'd sit on a box in the store there and spin yarms as well as talk tobacco, and I thought that was just about the jolly kind of business I'd like to go into. When I came back from the war! wrote a letter to Martin. He didn't answer it right away, and I had just about concluded that I couldn't get into the tobacco business when I got a note one day from the Postmaster of St. Louis saying that a letter had been left there some time before for me without a stamp on it. He had just found it, he said, and forwarded it to me. When I opened it what was it but a letter from Martin telling me to come and see him. I came and he gave me a job selling tobacco right off. After I had been with him but a short time, I quit to take a place with H. Hobdell, another tobacco merchant then. That was in 1865. For the next seven years I traveled for different tobacco firms. I became connected with Liggett & Myers as traveling salesman during the winter of 1873-14, and on the organization of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. became a stockholder. In 1882. I was given entire charge of the selling department; was elected secretary of the company in the years 1887, 1888 and 1889, and Vice-President in the years 1890, 1891 and 1892. In the years 1880, 1891 and 1892. In the years 1887, 1888 and 1889 and Vice-P day Post-Dispatch presents herewith a number of sketches of some of these repre-sentative citizens.

the pride of the St. Louis Scotsmen, is Dugald Crawford, a merchant prince now, but who came to St. Louis in 1864 with nothing to aid him but a thorough knowledge of the dry goods trade. Remarkable success attended his well-directed efforts in the intervening years, as he made enough money during the first three to start in business for himself and sufncient since to make his store one of the largest retail establishments in the country.

Mr. Crawford was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, educated on the island of Buie, and, when 15 years of age, apprenticed to a dry goods merchant in Glasgow. When he he had completed his apprenticeship he went to Dublin, from there to London and thence to Toronto, Canada, serving in the largest dry goods houses at each place. It was in 1856 that he came to America, and in 1864 that he left Canada for St. Louis. After arriving here he worked for C. B. Hubbell, Jr., & Co. for twelve months and then for Barr, Duncan & Co. for eighteen months.
He opened his first store in 1867 on the northeast corner of Broadway and Franklin avenue. It was only 12x14 feet in size.
To-day the firm occuples a five-story building of enormous proportions, larger than which there are very few retail dry goods stores in the country.

Mr. Crawford is very proud of the mammoth establishment his labors have built up. "I attribute my success," says Mr.
Crawford, "to knowing the dry goods business from A to Z. That's owing to a way they have of doing over in the old country.
In Scotland a boy has to learn some business from Scotland when I was young. I followed it all my life, and hence I know something about it. My advice to the young American is to emulate the example of the young Scotchmen. Learn some business and learn it thoroughly."

Mr. Crawford's two sons, John F. and James M. Crawford are following in their father's footsteps, both actively assisting him in the management of his mammoth store. President Thompson Was a Plumber.

William H. Thompson, President of the National Bank of Commerce, Broadway and Olive street, came to St. Louis forty-two years ago with a pot of lead and a piece of gas pipe. He was then a plumber who had learned his trade in Philadelphia, whither he had gone from his native town, Huntington, Pa., when he was only 20 years of age. He came West because he had heard there was more chance for a pushing young man out in this reputed wild and wooly country than in the effete East. He did well at his trade here, so well, in fact, that he was soon able to go into business for himself. For eleven years he conducted a plumbing shop and then established a lead pipe factory, which he also operated with considerable success. In 1871 he organized the Missouri Lead and Oli Co, but resigned in 1834 to accept the presidency of the Bank of Commerce, in which he had long been a stockholder and for some years a director.

Mr. Thompson attributes his success in life to nothing else but hard work, strict integrity and close attention to business. He is a man of striking personal appearance, tall and broad-shouldered. He is a prominent Odd Fellow and a very public-spirited man.

He was a leading member of the syndicate that built the new Planters' House, He is also Vice-President of the Laclede Building Association and was for some time President of the St. Louis Gas Co. He lives with his family in an elegant house at 3854 West Pine boulevard.

No man has done more toward advertising 8t. Louis than Adolphus Busch, the miliman and the present of the St. Louis Gas Co. He lives with his family in an elegant house at 38% from his native town fading how the Rhine. He was then only if years old. He worked for a commission house and served in the army under Gen. McNeil, but on attaining his majority received quite a snught into the brewers aupplies business. Among his customers was old Eberhard Anheuser, the properter of the Borwin Brewery, a small beer producing, establishment on Busch and old Anheuser backmere every friends and their intimacy resulted in Busch marrying anheuser's only daughter Blanch marrying anheuser's only daughter Blanch marrying anheuser sonly daughter Blanch marrying an the least of the St. Louis Gas Co. He lives with his father, the master of the Clark as the still married statistics, though, and got a position as general utility boy on a grave! train, He business with his father-in-law as a particular of the stablishment that its output was shipped for to the west and south and they into the establishment that its output was shipped for to the west and south and they are partner, young Busch, soon infused such tracted the attention of Sidney Dillon that business with his father-in-law as a particular of the stable and the s dent. On the death of Mr. Guid Mr. Clark was elected president of the Missouri Pacific but the Union Pacific directors would not let him retire from their company and so al compromise was effected by Mr. George Gould accepting the Missouri Pacific presidency and Mr. Clark remaining where he was. The dicker had the result of keeping Mr. Clark in Omaha instead of bringing him back to reside in St. Louis where he had been during his former reign with the Missouri Pacific.

Byron Nugent is another remarkable example of the self-made man. The magnificent establishment familiarly known as Nugent's, on Broadway from Washington avenue to St. Charles, is a monumental tribute to his energy and business ability, as he has made every cent he is worth by strict attention to the dry goods business. Born in Canada, near Kingston, in 1843 Bryon Nugent was apprenticed to J. H. Carey, a Scotch dry goods merchant at St. Thomas, but at the age of 16, wishing to know the dry goods business thoroughly, he worked in New York Chicago and Toronto stores and finally in 1867, he opened a dry goods store at Mount Vernon, Ill. In 1873 he sold out and coming to St. Louis opened a small store on the southeast corner of Broadway and Franklin avenue. His brothers, Donald C., Charles and James Nugent, then associated themselves with him. The new store was a success from the start. It was only 22:60 and it only gave employment to ten men. In the interval it has enjoyed a wonderful growth. To-day it employs over 500 people.

Mr. Byron Nugent is at present in Forida. Festus J. Wade a Street-Car Driver.

Festus J. Wade is a leader in all movements instituted for the benefit of the city and is generally regarded as a most representative citizen and quite a wealthy man. Yet not much more than fifteen years ago. Festus J. Wade drove a street car and prior to that time he occupied a number of even less important positions. Mr. Wade was born in Ireland thirty-six years ago, but came to this country with his parents when very young. He was only if years old when he went to work.

"My first job," says Mr. Wade, "was cash boy in Crawford's which was then known as Crawford, Russell & Inesee. That was in 1870. My next occupation was carrying water to laborers who were at work building the tunnel and the Eads bridge. I next officiated as general utility boy about a lamp store on Sixth street, near Franklin avenue. After that I was successively a clerk in a motion store at 609 Franklin avenue, a newsboy and proprietor of a newsstand, and the owner of a wagon which went through Illinois buying up butter and eggs. Then I started in to be a carpenter, but didn't like the trade and switched on to driving an ice wagon and then a grocery wagon. Tiring of this, I got a job in a safe factory, quit that to become time-keeper for a contractor who was building a branch of the Wabash from Ferguson to St. Louis and when that work was over, I drove a sprinkling cart for Wm. ## FACTS AND FEARS CONTROLLING WHEAT

NOT MUCH CHANGE IN PRICE.

Supplies Large, But Fears Felt of Crop Damage-Increasing Demand for Flour-Commercial Gossip.

It has been a stand-off between facts and fears in the wheat market during — past week. The facts were that supplies in sight are not being reduced as much, as they should at this season of the yerr, demonstrating that the demand has not improved for the actual article. Which is another adverse fact, that a third of the perilous month of March has passed with no certain damage of consequence to the crop, that speculation is light, with the ousder reserved and indifferent and the professional only looking for small "scalps." The fears were that some calamity might strike the crops of element this country or Europe, or that the Government report on farm resources might prove to be a builsh document. The consequence of this combination of facts and fears was that the market during the greater part of the week showed little change, swinging within to range in price, possessing little interest as a speculative commodity and consequently exhibiting little life. May sold as high as 53%c and July 53%c last Monday and as low as 52%c for both Thursday. Yesterday, there was quite a small advance, May selling at 53%@53%c and for July 53%c bid, though having sellers at the top rates, which were ½c gain over the preceding Saturday.

For much dry weather is reported in a sections of this State and Kansas, in the Southwest, with some talk of nage, but nothing of a serious nature so heard. The crop conditions abread are osatisfactory, except in France and in sia. Uuless it is, as charged, that the les are being worked to work the mars, there must be something wrong with French crops. There is almost too the smoke not to have some fire, and the ertion that it is too early to determine asse. If there is any indicates, at any damage, if there is any, indicates, at any rate, that apprehensions are felt. Supplies in that country have run down too low to allow their trade to rest easy with a shortened yield confronting them. On Feb. 1, stocks in their market were only a fourth of what they were one year ago—4,600,000 bu, against 19,500,000 bu, are the figures reported. The latest from Russia is not at all favorable either, the weather having been changing from mild and thawing weather to hard frosts, with no protection for the plant. Crop news from abroad will be potent influences in the market of the near future.

The corn market has been almost at a standstill, both as regards the price and the movement. May did not get above 43/40 %c. nor below 41/4c and July ranged from 420/42%c. Receipts have been running light at all Western markets and the prospects are for their so continuing for some time to come. There is said to be plenty left in the sections that raised most the crop last year, but farmers have begun their spring work and will be too busy from now on to market corn, and what is held in cribs is held for higher prices than can now be realized. But the demand at the markets shows no evidence of increasing and the stocks in sight show no diminution. The visible is about 15,000,000 bu, or within 4,000,000 bu of one year ago. A continuance of small receipts do not mean much lower prices, however, especially with such a shortage in the speculative market as now exists.

A little more strength has crept into oata, but the market was a tame and generally uninteresting one, both for cash and futures. There appears to be more confidence felt in the long side, but this chiefly in the vay option, and is based upon the belief that a considerable shortage is outstanding, hat the stock here is practically off the arket and that receipts from now on will be more than sufficient for current refirements. Not so much desire to sell ne is apparent, eitehr, but counting upon big crop this year, there are plenty of ders who believe in "shorting" July at und 26%c. Yesterday 30%c was bid for y, 30%c%c for June and 26c for July.

The Commercial Bulletin says of the flour market: The improved demand noted a week ago was even more decided this week. The best sustained and readlest to pay the higher prices asked was the domestic demand. Orders came in freely and liberally, the South being the best customer, the low river rates enabling good sales to be made to the lower river points, but the Southeast and the Southeast buying liberally, also. The East bought fairly. Quite a number of orders for country flour could not be filled, owing to inability to obtain such flour. City mills are now generally sold ahed on domestic orders. The foreigners also came up on their bids, and showed an evident desire to purchase. There was not, however, the profit in export sales, being generally at "bare cost." The daily cabling, however, and the fact that the other side came up on their bids, was encouraging. Sales for export were $2,000 sacks this week. Shipments were $5,263 barries South, 19,222 barrels East, 420 barrels Nouth, 19,222 barrels East, 420 barrels Nouth, 19,222 barrels East, 420 barrels Nouth and West—against $3,100 barrels last week and 49,999 barrels during the same week last year. NEW YORK, March 2—It was one of the most active days that we had on Saturday in a month of Sundays, and there was a spring to the market that astonished everybody, bulls and bears alike. There was very heavy trading in the covering of shorts, largely for German interests, and there was some outside buying, as well as some purchasing for Southern account. The crop movement continues liberal, but—considerable stress is laid upon the lateness of the preparations for the next crop. The probability of a diminished use of fertilizers, the assertion that the next yield will be smaller than the present one, and, finally, the cheapness of the price, and, furthermore, the Liverpool and the Manchester advices, are more encouraging. A private Liverpool cablegram says that Manchester's business is picking up and that many looms are again at work.

Greek interests here were buying. Europe has been buying here to some extent of late. The spot markets here and in Liverpool are higher. It is assedted that some of the English spinners are carrying very moderate stocks. One broker here bought 10,000 bales, principally May—understood to be for the short account. In the two hours of trading, the sales amounted to 176,900 bales, showing that the market is broadening. Prices advanced 13 to 15 points, and closed strong. Some Liverpool dispatches reported a good demand there, both to cover and also for investment. Futures advanced there 1½ to 2 points, and spot cotton 132-64, with sales of 10,000 bales, against 6,519 on last Monday and 8,110 on the corresponding Monday of last year. Houston also showed a large total, being 1,964 bales, against 6,12 last year. The arrivals at the ports were heavy, being estimated at 14,237 bales, against 6,668,940 at this time last year.

The question arises whether a material advance in cotton now may not defeat the efforts to have the cotton acreage reduced. Cotton is a crop on which secured more easily in the South than on any other crop. It can be planted up to about May 1. While the present activity and appearance of strength greatly encourage the bulls, there are many others who would have more faith in the movement in favor of higher prices if the receipts were not so heavy, both at the ports and in the interior towns.

James Parrott, the well known traveling man of Litchfield, Ill., has formed a connection with the Brinson-Judd Grain Co., and will travel for that house in Missouri and Illinois.

The Government report on farm reserves of grain will be issued to-morrow. It is expected to show 125,000,000 bu, wheat and 475,-000,000 bu, corn. One year ago 114,000,000 bu, wheat and 589,000,000 bu, corn were reported.

wheat and $89,000,000 bu. corn were reported.

The first sale of hay made in this market for export was consummated last week, Goddard, Hall & Sheridan placing 40 cars for shipment to Antwerp. This hay clears Tuesday by the new barge line. The sale is due to the cut in river rates, and means that this large amount of hay goes by way of 8t. Louis, where otherwise it would have gone all rail to New Orleans.

There are some traders who never allow their minds to dwell upon the market after they once get away from it. There are others who talk, think and eat (probably) nothing else. The other morning the Chicago "curb" on wheat was 54%c. It was before the opening and one of the traders meeting "Tug" Wilson saluted him with, "Good morning. How are you?" and "Tug," absently gazing at him, replied: "Four and an eighth."

sently gazing at him, replied: "Four and sently gazing at him, replied: "Four and an eighth."

Speaking of the situation in lead, Mr. Henry Greve of the John Wahl Commission Co., says: Lead has been irregular and to-day was unusually nervous, but the tendency buoyant and sales made of 600 tons Missouri for March at $2.85 and 300 tons argentiferous correding for March and April at $2.87½. Opinions of sellers and buyers have differed widely as to the real condition of the market during the past week. A prominent buyer, with decidedly bearish proclivities, has maintained that it has been quite an easy task to buy at $2.82½, or even less, but a close investigation proves that only a few stray cars of Missouri lead sold at $2.82½ and that at no time round lots of prominent brands were obtainable below $2.85. As the situation appears to me to-night, lead below $2.85 during the coming week is likely to be a scare commodity. I should not be surprised to see further large sales at our closing figures, say at $2.85 to $2.87½, and perhaps better rates might be demanded.

The Modern Miler of this date says: Crop conditions in the Southwest are practically as they were one week ago, with no particular change to be described. Reports of damage emanating from the extreme Southwest are still uttered, but little heed is given them. Rain is probably required in the Eastern portion of Kansas, but the plant will make progress for some time yet without this moisture. In the Western portion of Kansas conditions have not improved. As to the marketings of wheat they are very light, but millers are not so anxious for supplies, having stocked up last week from elevators, so that current receipts at winter wheat markets do not find such ready sale as heretofore. There is a slow demand for corn, which can be observed in the price. Feeders are still holding off, evidently finding substitutes very profitable.

A letter to a fruit commission house here from a Lake Burler, Florida, correspond-ent, strengthens the first reports from that State as to the damage by the bliszards and shows that the earlier statements as pondents in the same line of business:

"Weather bliszarding, Market statue quo. Trade moribund Merchants pessimestic. Teamsters despondent and drunk.
That's the situation here, with the Ohio river and onion setts rising in the South."

Potatoes seem to be steadily hardening in prices—in fact slowly but steadily advancing. The market is about bare of Early Rose, for which there is a big demand for seeding purposes, and it is possible that some other sorts, similar in appearance, are masquerading, as the Rose are going out. Certain it is the scarcity can hardly be accounted for. The piquant and pungent onion is not quite so much of a luxury as it has been, and the market is easier and a little lower. Apples, too—high as they have been—are going still higher, and an advance of at least 25 cents per barrel is credited. Three to four dollars a barrel from first hands for medium to good is the price, but a further seems assured.

The records have been broken here the past week in the receipts of eggs. The records of the Merchants' Exchange show that St. Louis received during the past week no less than 27,917 cases eggs, by far the largest number on record for one week. These figures will doubtless equal, if they don't exceed, New York's receipts during the same time. The decline in prices under the strain has, however, been far more rapid in New York than in St. Louis—the former decreasing during the past week from 25c to 15c dozen. During the same time in this city the reduction has been only 7c dozen; showing this city has been most profitable to Eastern shippers.

profitable to Eastern shippers.

If any doubt existed as to the size of the poultry crop of 1894, and the statements ventured that it was by far the largest ever raised in the United States, the receipts of eggs the past week dispelled any such doubt. Never were the markets of the country so deluged. They came with alarming suddeness from all quarters except the far north. Each day disclosed much larger receipts everywhere—in all the markets, big and little. St. Louis never had receipts to approach the enormous offerings of the past week, and rapid as the decline in prices were, such large quantities as the manifest revealed each day were never before sold here so high, and the speculators who bought and shipped these eggs must be credited with no little pluck and nerve, for each day the market was cleaned up.

During the past week letters have come from parties in Texas, Florida and Alabama who want to ship sweet potatoes here by the carload—all of which go to show that the yield in the South has been large, a good portion of which, it appears, is being carried through the rigors of winter very successfully. It can be said that our market does not take kindly to the varieties of sweet potatoes which are favorites in the South. The demand here is for the Nansemonds and Jerseys, and our market is so abundantly supplied with both by local growers and Southern Illinois that there is no paying opening for the Southern stock, and rarely is outside of June and July, when there is no local competition, when the new crop in the far South begins to move.

when the new crop in the far South begins to move.

The St. Louis Fruit roducers' Exchange has had several meetings lately, looking to establishing a collection department, limiting the time of payment for all patrons of the trade. Such improvements are in successful operation in all the leading trade centers, and the St. Louis people have lost so much through the somewhat loose and careless methods so long in vogue that steps are being taken to get much closer to a cash basis. It is claimed that certain parties, both in town and country, steadily prey on the trade through avenues of credit, so easy of access. The new rules, it seems, will cut off from credit all who do not meet their obligations within specified dates. Upwards of 70 firms, which embrace the entire fruit and produce trade of the city, including all the commission houses handling such goods, have subscribed to the new management.

The losses and mishaps the inexperienced are exposed to was well illustrated here the past week through the action of the Chicago man who came here to buy eggs. This particular party was a new man on the road, and represented a firm in the Windy City that had just started—making eggs a specialty. The party was very anxious to secure 100 cars of eggs Saturday (a week ago yesterday), but found 22 cents a dozen the best he could do, but could not get them repacked early enough to ship that day without some extra charges. He then, with the approval of his firm, no doubt, purchased from a down-town man 85 cars he had advices of to arrive Monday's shipment at Saturday's prices (22c), cases extra. Monday's market, when the eggs were shipped, was 17½c—a visible loss of over $100. When they struck Chicago Tuesday that market had declined to 17c, disclosing additional losses. Buying in advance on a declining market was a surprising move.

MISSING MR. ZANCK.

No Trace Yet Found of the Man Who

Nothing has as yet been learned of the hereabouts of A. F. Zanck (not Sautk, as has been printed), who left his home Monday and wrote his wife from Alton that he would commit suicide. It has developed that Mr. Zanck wrote about sixteen of his friends of his intention, but the impression prevails that the letters were written before he left the city.

Messrs. Waldeck and Crosby, two of Mr. Zanck's neighbors, went to Alton and saw the Chief of Police of that city. That official stated that a man answering Mr. Zanck's description was seen near the depot about 9 o'clock Tuesday evening. Beyond this nothing was learned.

cut short in front and turned directly up, giving pompadour effect; large blue eyes; frank, open countenance; ruddy complexion. He speaks with a pronounced German accent and is of an excitable temperament, using gestures in talking. He wore last a dark gray tweed coat and vest, brownish trousers, black overcoat with velvet collar. In his overcoat pocket he carried hard-knitted black woolen gloves. He wore no garment under his white shirt. His drawers were of striped white goods. They were fastened by two silver buttons foined by a silver chain. On these buttons were the initials R. Z. He wore white hand-knit cotton socks and a black felt derby hat; also a stand-up collar and black necktie. In his cuffs were black buttons with the initials R. Z. in gold. He wore a large seal ring also with the letters R. Z.

JOHN W. NORTON'S WILL.

Louise Montague Thinks He Made a Later One Than That Probated.

Some surprise has been manifested that the will of the late John W. Norton, dated so far back as 1888, should be allowed to stand as his last testament. It has been rumored that Miss Louise Montague, the actress, and one of his closest friends, knew of a later will dated in 1892, and that she expected to be one of the beneficiaries. When Miss Montague was seen she would not state positively whether or not she had any claim against the estate, but did say that she would make no contest, as the estate was valueless. She is certain that he made another will because Mr. Norton told her so in 1892. It is of no consequence whether there is another will or not, as there will be nothing of value left of the estate to divida.

James and John Hilliker and James McMullen were before Judge Morris yesterday for discharging firearms, but were set at liberty because the prosecuting witness, Wm. Fitzgibbons, had disappeared in alarm. The charge was that on Feb. 23 while the Hillikers and McMullens were shooting with a cat rifle, one of them fired at Fitzgibbon, the bullet striking him in the leg. The trio were arrested, but they spread a report that Fitzgibbon was to be arrested for throwing stones and he became frightened.

A GOOD MARKET TO LET ALONE.

DIFFICULT TO FORECAST.

The Covering of Local Shorts Stiffened Prices and They Improved at Closing.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Veteran operafors say that never in their experience in speculation has the drift of prices been more difficult to forecast than now. This is the case only not because of the present situation and outlook, but because the ex-ceedingly narrow limits within which the narket is confined make estimates worth ceedingly narrow limits within which the market is confined make estimates worthless. Securities do not seem to be held by people who are affected by events formerly relied on to produce certain results. Two or three large professionals are active in the market, and room traders toil along after them with more or less success, but the public are missing. When the latter appear they are sellers. It is a time when signs fall. Speaking technically the street declares the present a good market to leave alone.

The best explanation is probably to be found in the inffrence that has been exercised on the market of the past two years by various matters—notably, legislation. Washington has been so prominent in street calculations during that time that the usual influences have been overlooked, though now they are returning. The repeal of the Sherman law and the ending of the tariff legislation caused the whole list to advance without reason. Of course these advances were not maintained, but a dozen times during the past two years there have been these spurts and false starts in spite of a general situation in the shape of railway and corporation earnings and general finances that was simply deplorable. Another explanation beside that of legislative influence is to be found in the utter absence of outside interest. The continued control over adverse foreign exchanges evidenced in the operations of the bond syndicate may well be reckoned on. A slight hardening in money rates is observable, and while this tendency seems to be due to artificial causes it may become a very lively factor in the stock market.

In its financial article to-day the Post says: Although London sold some stocks heavily to-day, the market is similarly extended. But of the market is similarly extended of the market is similarly extended. But of the m dismay over the Canadian company's divident suspension was in one sense natural, but it showed nevertheless some simple-mindedness. The whole dividend guarantee fund episode was a curious and suspicious experiment. When a corporation sells new stock for cash and lays by the cash to provide for future dividends on the stock issued to raise it, a critic seems to be transported into the epoch of South Sea finance. This stock, however, recovered smartly on the London board to-day, and locally Baltimore and Ohio railied several points. In the last mentioned stock dividend suspension is in all possibility the worst investors have at present to expect. How much influence was exerted on the market by the singular assurances through this morning's newspaper dispatches that a big Baltimore pool was about to support the stock is doubtful. Big pools ordinarily buy without advertising their purpose in advance, for the reason that pools, like plain individuals, prefer to buy at the lowest. Some of these foreign sales of stock will undoubtedly result in shipment of the securities to New York. This will lay a further burden on the bond syndicate in its operations in exchange.

Eventually the profound newspaper and congressional critics who were so ready to furnish brains for the measurement of the Government's loss in the bond contract will, perhaps, absorb a few of the elementary facts in the case. Of course, it would be foolish to suppose that the bond contract will, perhaps, absorb a few of the elementary facts in the case. Of course, it would be foolish to suppose that the bond contract will, perhaps, absorb a few of the elementary facts in the case. the net result was nothing great. Sugar reached par, which was to be expected. The bank statement was subject to the same perplexities as have existed ever since the bond payments began. Presumably certificates held against advances of gold are now being scheduled under loans. Otherwise the increase in loans of five million without any gain in the net deposits would be incomprehensible.

VENUE CHANGES · MUCH ENTANGLED.

Affidavits in One Case Against All City Justices' Courts.

PUZZLING DECISION PENDING.

Admixture of Law and Religion Dependent Upon Justice Cline for a Solution.

Justice of the Peace Frederick A. Cline of the Ninth Justiceship District has under advisement a most novel legal entanglement resulting from a very peculiar admix-ture of law and religion.

About the middle of February William A. Company, filed suit in Justice Sheehan's court against the Catholic Publishing Company for $75, which amount the plaintiff court against the Catholic Publishing Company for $75, which amount the plaintiff's attorney, John C. Robertson, claimed was due a typewriter which had been bought from the Parker Stationery Company by John P. Warren, manager of the Church Progress, a Catholic weekly, published by the defendant company, but which had never been paid for. Edward A. Feehan, attorney for the defendant, admitted that Mr. Warren had used the machine, but explained that it had been stolen from the Church Progress office. Mr. Warren was willing to settle the matter on a reasonable basis, Mr. Feehan explained, but as he machine had been in use for some time he did not think it worth as much as $75. Assignee Fuller refused to compromise the claim and this caused the suit.

The case was set for trial Thursday, Feb. 28, but when Justice Sheehan asked if the litigants were ready for trial Attorney Robertson stepped forward and said:

"Your Honor, I wish to file a motion for a change of venue. I have the necessary affidavits here properly signed."

"All right," said Justice Sheehan, "the change of venue is granted."

Mr. Robertson and Mr. Feehan then stepped over to Clerk Gereke's desk to see where the case would be sent, Mr. Feehan picked up the application for the change, of venue and after glancing at it for a second dropped it in amazement.

"Good heavens, Mr. Robertson," he exclaimed, "you haven't left us anyone to send it to."

This outburst on Mr. Feehan's part was occasioned by the fact that the affidavit of Mr. Fuller, which Mr. Roberston prein the Insurance Building, admitted that the facts in the case, as stated, were correct.

"My client," said Robertson, "certainly had a perfect right to a change of venue since he believed Judge Sheehan prejudiced. But whether he had a right to disqualify five other justices I don't pretend to say. Judge Sheehan granted the application, but whether Judge Cline will take similar action remains to be seen. He may grant the change of venue, but overrule the portion of the application referring to Justices Zimmerman and Harmon. He may send it to them or he may send it to them or he may send it out into the country. I haven't any idea what he will do."

When asked why his client thought the six justices prejudiced, Mr. Robertson said he really couldn't say, but remarked that "you must take into consideration that the defendant is a Catholic publishing company."

Mr. Feehan, when seen, said he had no idea where Justice Cline would send the case, and was awaiting his decision with much interest.

COMPLAINT AGAINST SCHOOL BOARD. Contractors Protest Against Paying Fee for the Use of Plans.

Board's methods of letting contracts for heating apparatus, and hints at favoritism for certain systems. The writer says:

To the Editor of the Fost-Dispatch.

Can the Post-Dispatch inform me when the School Board began to charge for the plans of buildings furnished to heating contractors, and if so, why this charge is made? Where does the money go? And what are Architect Kirchner and his draughtamen drawing annual salaries for? On April bids are to be opened for heating seven. Is this bids are to be opened for heating seven. Is this building plan or 355 for the seven. Is this done in order to make livelier competition? This is the building plan alone. The advertisement states that the bidder must submit his own plan and specifications for heating the building bid upon. This will cost the contractor at lowest $50 more for each building, $350 for the seven, and added to what the paid architect of the board demands for his plans, a total of $335.

"I am not an applicant for one of the places on the Circuit Bench," said Judge Harrison. "My business engagements are such as to forbid it. I feel very grateful for the many kind expressions which have come to me in the matter, and while I have no assurance that I would have been appointed, even if I were an applicant, still, in response to the inquiries of my friends, I have considered the matter and have reached the above conclusion. I do not wish an appointment, and, of course, will not be appointed."

IN THE FIELD OF LABOR.

The Arbeiter-Verband, the German Labor Assembly, at its meeting received a delegate from Coopers' Union, No. 3.

Four members were added to the committee having the March celebration in charge.

A committee was appointed to work up the May celebration.

The Brewers' Union delegates complained that the building trades took little interest in the brewery boycott and gave it little assistance, either morally or financially.

The Lasters' Protective Union reported progress in unifying their interests, also that several shops are now "fair."

The Furniture Workers' Union reported that the several unions in that line were solidly agreed and were pushing vigorously the boycotts now in force.

The Arbeiter-Verband indorsed a boycot now being enforced by the tailors. It also selected Delegates Trebau, Morlang, Mahn, Schuetz and Kretchmar as an Agitation Committee.

The Lasters' Protective Union has yoted Committee.
The Lasters' Protective Union has voted $25 to the A. R. U. for the Debs' defense fund.

After some years of strife the two painters' organizations, the local of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, and the Journeymen Painters' Union, have settled their differences. They have formed a joint executive board and will endeavor to bring in the journeymen house painters of St. Louis. An executive board has been established of seven members from each of the societies named. The scale decided upon is $3.50 a day for journeymen house painters in St. Louis for 1886. Any member found working below that rate will be fined $5 per day for the first offense, and on repetition expelled. Any member working with a non-union painter will be fined $1.50 per day for each day he does so.

The Marble Polishers' Union has received word from the National Association of Marble Cutters and Setters of America that the differences between that body and the National Polishers' Union have been settled. The local union is promised the support of the cutters and setters. This means that the marble cutters at Pickel's will go out if the marble polishers, who are now on strike, wish them to do so. The marble polishers have headed off several gauge of polishers bound here from outside.

The Musicians' Mutual Benevolent Union has made the scale for "wagon parades" for base ball games $3 per man; and the same for playing two hours at the park before the game begins. This rate applies also to substitutes.

The local Unions of the National Brotherhood of Electrical Workers have ratified an amendment allowing members suspended for non-payment of dues to come back as new members, if a year has elapsed after suspension. Hitherto such have had to pay all dues in arrears. During the hard times many members had to drop out and this action is taken to facilitate their return.

The Brewers' Benevolent Association at its last meeting elected to fill the place of Secretary Christ Rener, who died recently. Simon Schorr. Mr. Edward Busch of the Brewers' Supply and Hop Company, was elected honorary member. The twenty-fifth anniversary of the union will be celebrated at Concordia Park June 30.

The Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators have taken umbrage at the action of the American Federation in recognizing J. T. Eliot as National Secretary instead of J. W. McKinney, who, they claim, was legally elected at the Buffalo convention last summer. It is alleged that since then Eliot, who was former Secretary, has held a pocket convention at Cleveland, which elected him to that position at the behest of the Eastern membership of the order. It is feared that this action of the Executive Board of the American Federation of the Executive Board of the American Federation of the Debs' defense fund. Four new Electrical Workers' local unions were organized during February.

The Lady Tobacco Workers' Union has refused to indorse the strike of the Marble Polishers because the rules of their Union forbid them taking sides in strike disputes. The National Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, whose headquarters are in this city, will soon start out C. L. White of Chicago as organizer.

The Journeymen Painters keep up a reading and reception room at the southwest corner of Tenth and Olive streats.

The Tailors' Union has voted $10 to Debs and $10 to the striking marble polishers.

A CORPSE IN A SACK.

Startling Testimony of Mrs. Taylor in the Gilbert Murder Case.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.
ST. CHARLES, Mo., March 9.—The tria ST. CHARLES, Mo., March 3.—The trial of Joseph Corbett for the murder of Zude Gilbert is in progress. The State has closed its case. The only witness of importance was a Mrs. Taylor, who had been living at times with Gilbert and Williams. She testified to hearing the shot and going to see what was the trouble, and saw Williams and Corbett take the body of the old man and throw it into the river, after sewing it up in a sack and tying some rocks to it. Corbett was put on the stand in his own defense. He testified that Williams killed Gilbert during a dispute. The shot was fired from Corbett's ride, which Williams picked up from the foot of a tree. Corbett jumped up and said, "Great God, Williams, what have you done?" Williams then forced him to assist him in putting the body in a sack with some rocks and throwing it into the river. Corbett made a good witness for himself. The case will probably be closed to-night. Williams will be tried Monday.

Messages Cost 12 1-2 Cents Each, and the Chicago Inter-Ocean The telegraph service of Great Britain ndoubtedly guicker, more reliable and heaper than that of the United States. I cheaper than that of the United States. I make this statement after proper allowance of the differences in distances. It costs 12½ cents for twelve words and I cent for every additional word. This for Great Britain and Ireland—a uniform rate.

It works admirably, as nearly all the postoffices are also telegraph offices. As a rule, the people are civil and obliging, and the delivery of messages more prompt than with us.

These postoffices, which include, as a rule, we stands and stationers' shops, are scatted all over the city, especially in Long, and one has no such trouble in get-us postoffice orders, postal notes, stamps, c., ds is too often the case in New ork.

ting postoffice orders, postal notes, stamps, etc., as is too often the case in New York.

Another great advantage of the British system is that there is no such thing as sending messages, "Collect." You can prepay an answer to a telegram, and the boy brings up a blank with the telegram when an answer has been paid for.

Again, if you write to any one and want a telegraphic reply, merely inclose a blank with six penny postage stamps affixed. This saves the trouble of transmitting money or imposing on a friend for reply. At one of the big city dinners a few weeks ago I sat opposite W. H. Preece, C. B. the the engineer-in-chief and electrician of British Telegraphic Wonderland. He was greatly interested in the fact that we counted the population by the means of electricity, and, of course, knew exactly how it was done.

The increase in twenty-five years of messages alone from 6.00,000 when three private companies controlled the business, to 70,000,000 messages in 1894, tells its own story. That the number of offices has increased threefold, now numbering 9,000, and the miles of wire have increased from 60,000 to 18,000,000 messages in the telegraph department is to-day paying expenses, but not the interest on the money invested, it is claimed, however, that the division of expenses between the postoffice branch and the telegraph branch was of such an artificial character that the two services should be looked at together financially. This would show a net annual surplus of from 113,750,000 to 18,000,000 avery three financially. This would show a net annual surplus of from 113,750,000 to 18,000,000 avery handsome addition to the public revenues.

A uniform telegraph service, say of Ecents per message, is no more, in this advanced day of electrical appliances, than a uniform two-pent letter rate was when adopted.

stumps, etc., preparatory to the work of excavation. Inspector of Weights and Measures Lyons says that he will put the first division of laborers at work Monday morning, without waiting for the formal approval of the topographical plans.

The location of the lake is shown in the accompanying plat furnished to the Post-Dispatch by Mr. Colby. It will lie almost in the exact center of the southern side of the park, its north end reaching a point about haif way across the park. The lake will be not less than 765 feet long.

The computations have been made from the city topographical charts, which may be 5 per cent in error.

As is shown in the illustration, there are four deep holes in the bed of the lake. These will be filled with earth obtained from the proposed new drive. The lake will be entirely natural; indeed, water could be pumped in at the present moment if two of the holes were not natural sewers sufficient to drain all that section of the park. These depressions are much deeper than is desirable, and, for this reason, are to be filled. The lake, when completed, will be three and one-half feet deep at the north end and four feet at the south end. The natural outline will be preserved, except for a distance of about 100 feet on both sides of the lake, the only cut in the bed of the lake being a few feet between holes No. 3 and No. 4. The total circumference of the lake will be about 2,000 feet—the water surface following a line sixty-four feet above the water-level. This, too, will also follow the natural topographical line, being from ten to thirty feet away from the slope to the water. An attempt will be made to preserve the present utrif, and, with this end in view, the natural slope to the water and one-half feet above that of the eleven and one-hal turf, and, with this end in view, the natural slope to the water surface will remain as it is.

The surface of the Carondelet lake will be eleven and one-half feet above that of the Post-Dispatch Lake, in Forest Park.

The culy filling necessary will be in the four holes. The fill for the first is seven feet, for the second and the fourth sixteen feet, and for the third eighteen feet. The out necessary between the third and the fourth holes is eight feet.

The drive will connect with the present park drives, the terrace beyond the drive sloping four to one.

The intake and discharge chamber is to be located at the south end. A valve gate will connect with the bottom of the fourth hole by means of a pipe, all necessary water pipes being put in by Commissioner Holman.

Among other facts and figures submitted by Mr. Colby were the following: Total cut, 18,025 cubic yards; total fill, 16,92 cubic yards; water capacity, 6,225,775 gallons, drainage area, 13.8 acres, furnishing 24-78 gallons for every inch of rain, and filling the lake with seventeen inches of precipitation. The average evaporation 35 inches. The sheltered position of the lake will materially reduce the evaporation.

ARE YOU GOING TO EUROPE?

If So, Here Are Many Suggestions From Experience.

DETAILED COST OF THE TRIP

How to See the Old World Pleasantly in an Economical and Inexpensive Way,

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch. To those who have never made a trip to rope there are many little points, learned often by the dearly bought experience others, which it is to their interest to ow and observe. The suggestions given ewith do not aim solely at a saving in cost of traveling, since it is a great mis-e to make sacrifices of opportunities within reach but once in a lifetime, for the sake of a small additional outlay of expense.

If the trip is to be of two, three or four months' duration and is to cover' many points, the incidental expenses and cost of living, aside from transportation, will be considerably greater than if but a few leading points are chosen and a stay of several weeks made in each. To those intending to be "on the wing" for four, five or six months, it will be very difficult to count the cost very closely before starting. However, there are many ways of getting very near to
it. The conducted tours give you full particulars as to route, time and the main item of expense. This may be the best way for young persons going alone or with an inexperienced companion, but judging from all the dissensions and complaints we heard whenever we encountered one of these parties—and there are many of them—we should recommend small parties, say two or three intiveste friends and family parties to try their ne, for the sake of a small additional out-nend small parties, say two or three inti-nate friends, and family parties, to try their mate friends, and family parties, to try their own conducting for the most satisfactory, pleasurable and profitable results. To gain all these results the Tourist Companies have done much for us. Write to several of them and get their route and terms. Their itineraries give you a choice of many routes, with the time allotted for each place as best suited to the entire time which you contemplated traveling. Select one of these routes then buy their circular ticket, which will save you infinite annoyance and loss of time. Besides you will not have to carry so much money with you. The whole ticket is not any more expensive than were you to buy it in sections yourself, and in many instances it is cheaper.

These tickets are, for numerous reasons a boon to the traveler in foreign lands. These companies have their offices in all the principal cities; they will show you many courtesies, and with the same outlay of money you are altogether better off than if you bought your own tickets at each point. Before leaving New York you can settle for the entire trip and get your ticket books at several points along the route. Should you wish to diverge or give up any part of the trip, the cost of the ticket less lo per cent will be returned to you on presenting the unused tickets. You can also extend or shorten the time at any stop. Thus you can learn one of the large items of expense.

As to the cost of crossing the ocean, that depends upon the time you choose for crossing and the size and velocity of the steamer. Better first class on a smaller, slower steamer, than second class on an ocean racer. If you cross before May 1 and return before Aug. 15 or Sept. 1, the same accommodations will cost a little less. All this should be arranged with the steamship company before you start, and by purchasing going and return tickets from the same company you also save 10 per cent, and have the additional comfort of feeling safe about your return accommodations, and another big item is dispensed with. Luggage, living and sight seeing constitute the remaining large items and tastes of each individual better in small parties than in large ones.

There are many advantages in going and returning early aside from the lesser cost. If bound for England, France or Germany, May is the gay season when the fashionable drives of the cities are crowded every afternoon with the bon-ton element; the shops are resplendent and outdoor life is so thoroughly enjoyable and less fatiguing than in mid-summer. If you go by way of the Mediterranean route and visit Spain, the Rivieria and Italy first, you will never find nature more charming at these points than in May and June. From the beauty of Andalusia and Castile on the Monte Carlo, calm Capri and the beautiful Bay of Naples, through all the charms of art and nature dalusia and Castile on the Monte Carlo, calm Capri and the beautiful Bay of Naples, through all the charms of art and nature in Italy, at last you sail the Italian lakes and go by diligence over the back bone of the Alps down to the foot of Mount Blanc in the beautiful vale of Chamonix.

After this little bit of French Savoy, you reach Geneva and the other-charming points in Switzerland, just in time for the Alpine flowers the melting of the glaclers and the consequently beautiful waterfalls and mountain torrents, and find that there is the summer vacation ground of Europe. The same hotel accommodations are higher in Switzerland in July and August than earlier or later. But who would not spend their two or three weeks in Switzerland when nature and mankind are out for a frolic, in preference to seeing these sublime sights more or less alone? It is very much like a good play at the theater. You enjoy it more if there is a full house, while you might even fall to enjoy it if you were about the only spectator.

By taking the southern countries first you are apt to rench Paris and London in the dull season, and vice versa if you go by the northern route, the mid-summer's heat will deter you from taking a run into Italy, the Rivieria, Spain, or a short Oriental dash; and if you do go then, the sultry, oppressive climate will make you regret your choice of time, and you will find yourself out of the tourist season and all the more a prey to those who live off of the traveling public.

If you go South at all, go early and directly there, starting not later than the middle or latter part of April.

middle or latter part of April.

As to luggage, if you wish to travel economically and comfortably, take as little as possible. A small steamer trunk, two toilet satchels and two hand-bags, folders or valises, are ample for two or even three if they are of one party. This seems a small amount, but I have seen it done, and then the persons interested said they had several unnecessary things which they wished were at home, and which they usually ended by giving away to make room for the little purchases which one does and should pick up on the way. Small as they may be and mexpensive, you never know their true value until the constant recurrence of thought to the pleasant associations of time, scene and absent faces make them invaluable as memory trophies.

A lady should have one very good, perfectly new cloth dress with waist, jacket or wrap to match, with a pretty silk waist or blouse and two cotton shirt waists. This amount judiclously combined would make a great many changes and one could be comfortable in most any temperature usual in that season or on any occasion. An additional silk dress made of soft crushable material would be a most desirable addition and will be very useful for table d'hote, driving, opera, etc. Add to this one more fancy waist which would look well with either cloth or silk dress skirt, and one has an extensive outfit in traveling gowns. If you are traveling all the time, you will scarcely need a house-gown, nor would you appear in it outside your room. Many say you should take old clothes to wear at sea. Well, if they are not next to new and very good at that, you will not feel comfortable in them. A second best dress and wrap—if one goes early, when it is likely to be cold and rough—is: a good thing to take and leave with your steamer robes in care of the steamship company.

If you go to Genoa or Naples and return by way of Southampton, you will find your wraps and ocean suit in your state-room swaiting you on the return typ if you take both passages from the same company. Otherwise you can express them direct to sive detours and require only your hand luggage.

For instance, send it from Munich to Colon while yow go to Dresden, Berlin, Frankfort, and down the Rhine without it. Then from Colon to Paris while the tour of Holland and Belgium are made. From Paris to London, while you stop at Dieppe and Brighton. Management of this kind is a great saving of time and expense. For short stops you do not need more than you can carry with you and there are uniformed baggage porters at all stations who carry each piece to and from the car to your conveyance for 2 cents each, so you do not have to handle it yourself. A trunk costs much more. It costs as much as a person to and from the hotel and each man who carries it up or down stairs expects a fee, so you may be constantly paying for it when you do not need the contents.

A gentleman can, if the trip is not over two or three months' duration, do nicely on one new suit and medium weight overcoat. He will want to have one or more new ones made in London before returning. He would be well outfitted with two new suits on the trip and one steamer suit. Dress suits are seldom worn by the average tourist at the opera, table d' hote or other evening events where the general public are admitted, but the ladies are apt to don their lace and jewels, so the lady tourist feels very comfortable in her pretty silk waist or full silk suit. At the Casino at Monte Carlo they expect men to wear dress suits, while the women habitues are usually beautifully gowned, though tourists are usually tailor made.

One prettily trimmed straw hat, light in weight, and a little bonnet for evening wear which must stand some crushing, and which it is best to buy over there, answers for a lady's head-gear. The one main point is, do without a little rather than let your baggage be an unnecessary care and expense. I have seen men who—I am sure by the expressions they wore—wished that their wives were snugly at home many a time. After much exactious waiting at the station they would appear late in the dining room when more than half the courses were served. When the hotel was not very full or the season at its height, they would find themselves the only ones who had taken the trouble to change, and all this was done for disinterested strangers whom they might never see again. Thred travelers or sight seers do not care to spend much surplus time on their tastes, so if one goes to see and learn and enjoy the trip and keep on the move, one has not much time or disposition for dressing, and it is not required.

Take a few very good things and buy little accessories as you feel the need of them. It is wonderful how little linen or underwear one needs. You are getting your washing done constantly so if you have much of a relay you never get an opportunity to look at it. Take but two full sults and if any part of it falls, discard it and buy more. After you have packed, weed out your belongings a first, second and third time until you feel that you have nothing left.

Living is a matter which the individual tourist must gauge for himself. A conducted party knows the cost of each day in advance. The tourist companies' coupons are very good to use occasionally, as it suits your convenience or fancy. They furnish lists of hotels and choice of several in each city. One advantage, you can choose your hotel ahead and have your mail sent there by your London banker. This is a great convenience. Poste restante takes time, and if the letter reaches its destination after your departure, it is never called for, while the hotel people will always forward it to you or you will find it awaiting you on your arrival.

A room, good breakfast and table d'hote dinner at very good hotels can be secured by these coupons for $2.15 per day. You take your midday lunch wherever you find yourself, which, of course, costs extra; $2.50 to $3.50 per day covers the cost of living for each person. One dollar a night is the usual price for a room if used by one, $2 if used by two. These coupons include light and service, but as the servants don't know that you have paid for it, they expect the same of you as of the other guests and you would feel very small to dodge them or fail to respond to their affectionate farewells as you pass from their sight forever. You remember their polite and gracious greeting, and when you think of our own surly servants, whom the proprietor of their graciousness, aside from their services. I will wager that the man who headed for the door and never looked sidewise or back upon the people who depended upon his coming and his going for a living in returns home than the man who headed for the door and never looked sidewise or back upon the people who depended upon his coming and his going for a living in return for cheerfully rendered services. The system is wrong, of course, but, then, it is the system, and they are really satisfied with so little from each, that on the whole trip one need not spend more than from $25 to $50, and then will get value returned, too.

Sight-seeing is the item which it is most difficult to figure on in advance. If traveling to see and learn, you cannot afford to stop and consider each entrance fee or waste time on street transportation. A carriage two or three hours the first day or days, according to length of visit in each place, is absolutely necessary. After that you will know the lay of the land and can go where you wish to put in considerable time and not retain the carriage. Read much before you go and know what you mostly expect to see at each point. You will find your Badeckers very voluminous and cumbersome—I might say lumbersome—and apt to interfere with the view. One tourist going down the Rhine said to another who was pouring over his "guide," "Won't you take a look at the scenery, sir?" and received the answer. "No, thank you; I have it all here in my book."

To the well-informed, local guides other than those furnished at the points of interest are unnecessary in Great Britain or Central Europe. Moreover, they are apt to tire you out bodily and mentally racing over too much ground, leaving you with a will-o'-the-wisp impression of what you have seen and very little tangible information. In Spain, Morocco, the Orient, Russia, Norway and Sweden, if you are alone, some time must be spent with a local guide and interpreter. French is the language which will aid you most universally.

A letter of credit on a London bank is advisable and some American Express money checks as well. The latter in small amounts of $10 and $20 are most convenient. They pass as cash in the hotels in Spain and Tangier. There are so many national and religious holidays in the countries of Europe that one might be seriously inconvenienced if one depended upon banks entirely to draw money from. Most any merchant or hotel in Europe will accept American Express checks for cash.

To those who want to figure on a trip at a reasonable cost, including pleasure and comfort, I would say, learn the cost of transportation, allow $3 a day for living expenses and the matter of sight-seeing will cost from $2 to $5 each sight-seeing day if your time is limited in each place. An average of $10 per day from the day you start until you return ought to give very valuable and pleasurable returns. A ma, traveling alone or with a small party of rhen can travel cheaper—much cheaper if he confines himself strictly to necessities. Most Americans in Europe, true to their hature, desire to appear well and live much more expensively than there is any need of, and if you are out for a good time socially it is very tempting and gratifying to go at least occasionally where they meet the care-free, bon tourist.

LAWYERS' STORIES.

also exceedingly plain-spoken at time had the old-fashioned habit of usir pletives occasionally, when milder lan falled to do justice to his feelings.

One morning Judge Lindley ascended bench of No. 4, as usual, but with a so pression on his face, indicating that hot in a seraphic mood. The court we ready well filled with lawyers and the series of t Missouri who wanted to beg off from jury duty. Man after man filed up before the Court and formulated his reasons for asking to be excused—Judge Lindley's face, meanwhile, growing blacker and blacker. Pinally a nervous German braved his eye and stood waiting to enter his plea for escape. "Well, my man," growled the Judge, "what excuse have you for not wishing to do your duty as a juror?" "Ich kann nicht guten English spraken," stammered the luckless Teuton. "Aber I understand not yet already!" Judge Lindley gave a vicious bite on his quid of tobacco, and spat his disguist at this court!"

And the poor German was duly impanto the great delight of those who had obeard this prompt decision.

A Joke on Judge Barclay.

Judge Shephard Barclay of St. Louis is now on the Supreme Court bench of Missouri, but before he reached that exalted height he was one day forced to listen to an opinion of his judicial rulings in St. Louis which was far from flattering, and which caused his local brothers in the law to rally him unmercifully for some time thereafter. It was while Barclay was a Circuit Judge in Court Room No. 3, in this city, that the incident in question occurred, and the party of the second part was the famous Leander J. Smith. The Sunday Post-Dispatch has already had something to say of the eccentricities of Smith as a lawyer. He was aqueer genius—believed to be of Mexican blood—and many amusing stories are told about him. It chanced that Smith was trying a case in No. 3, before Judge Barclay, one day, and the case went against Smith's client. The Court's rulings had, as it happened, been invariably adverse to Smith, and the latter announced his intention of taking an appeal. He was making quite a speech on the subject, when Judge Barclay interrupted him.

"Before you go any further, Mr. Smith," said the Court, "please be so kind as to state upon what grounds you intend basing your application for appeal from the decision of this court? This is necessary, and the court must know to what rulings you take exception in the present trial of the case.

Lawyer Chester H. Krum of St. Louis is merciless in his joking and twitting of opposing lawyers in the trial of cases, but sometimes he runs against a snag. On one occasion he was counsel for plaintiff in a dry goods dispute involving several thousand dollars, and F. M. Estes was retained for the defense. During the examination of a witness Mr. Krum detected a flaw in Mr.

tected a flaw in Mr. Estes' knowledge of the details of the dry goods business and began chaffing him about it.

"The counsel for the defense," said Mr. Krum, "should post himself more fully on dry goods if he hopes to bring out anything intelligible for his side in this case."

"I am not in the dry goods business," replied Estes; "but I flatter myself I know as much about it as the counsel for plaintiff."

"Not by any means," was Krum's retort.
"I was in that business for a year before I studied law. What I don't know about dry goods isn't worth knowing."

Lawyer Estes signalled to the witness on the stand to step down. Then he turned to the Sheriff and said:
"Mr. Sheriff, call Chester H. Krum as a witness for the defense. May it please the Court, I summon this witness as a self-confessed expert, and if he is an expert I will prove certain points for the defense by his own testimony."

The bluff had failed to work, and amid general laughter, shared by the Court itself, Mr. Krum begged off from serving as a witness against his own client.

TENEMENT HOMES

The Mighty Struggle of the Poor for Mere Existence.

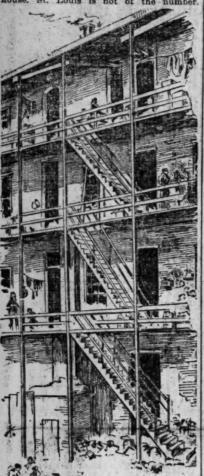

HUDDLED IN TINY ROOMS.

Sixty Thousand People Dwell Amid Abject and Unsanitary Surroundings in This City.

In a recent interview published in the Post-Dispatch, Mr. G. A. Weber, special agent of the Department of Labor, described model tenement houses of Europe and America visited by himself and Dr. Gould of Johns Hopkins University.

Very few American cities, according to Mr. Weber, can boast of a model tene

However, the extent of the city is so large that the evils of overcrowding are not nearly so great here as in many other large cities of the country.

In his last annual report Chief Health Officer Charles W. Francis says: "There now exists in this office a full and detailed report of 1,763 tenement houses. What is meant by tenement houses are houses occupied by five or more families having the use in common of halls, yards, closets and water supply. The condition of these houses has been found to be fair, but there is still very great room for improvement. The city ordinances relating to tenement houses are defective; the regulations are not sufficiently specific and do not apply to tenement houses when

According to this report, 59,912 persons were living in 36,616 rooms in the tenement houses, defined as above, in twenty-three man, L. N. Bates and others will deliver addresses.

A number of counterfeit silver dolairs are in circulation in East St. Louis, mostly about the race track, where they are termed "dead ones." They are excellent imptations in appearance, but are light in weight.

Coroner Campbell held an inquest over the remains of Alphonso Gardner, colored, who died without medical attendance at his home on Gatz avenue. A verdict of death from natural causes was returned.

A team of ponies belonging to the Tom Thumb company, ran away on Colliasville avenue yesterday. The carriage drawn by the ponies, which was unoccupied at the time, was slightly damaged.

About ninety feet of wire was cut from the poles of the Citizens' Electric Light Company in the northern part of the city yesterday. The police were notified and arrested a man who gave the name of Michael Dalley on suspicion.

A concert will be given by St. Louis tal-gation held a social at the church Friday night.

A special business meeting of the C. K. of I., branch No. 2, will be held this afternoon at St. Patrick's Hall.

Henry Gardner, residing on the island, had two fingers of his right hand broken in a friendly wrestling bout.

The funeral of a little daughter of A. H. Dodge took place at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon to St. Peter's Cemetery.

L. F. Lindsay of St. Louis will conduct special praise services at Association Hall this afternoon.

Overcrowding seemed to be pushed further, however, in some of the smaller tenement houses on South Second and South Third streets. A popular type in this section is a house without halls, the rooms being accessible only from the yard or from a narrow porch running around the upper, rear and side walls. The long house is divided laterally by a partition and the rooms extend one after another in two monotons ous rows. All sanitary conveniences are located in the yard between the disconnections from the life of the city. The Twenty-swenth and Twenty-sixth, Twenty-swenth

It is like living in a dungeon to live in an inside room in the Ashley. The one place where the tenants can find sunshine and breathing space is the long porch in the rear on each floor. Here wood is chopped and various household tasks are performed.

The larger proportion of the tenants of the Ashley are Poles of whom many cannot speak a word of English. The great structure presented a deserted appearance when the reporter was there, the children having left it for the sunny, open lot and the railway yards in the rear. The vigorous aduits were away at work, hunting work or perchance treading sawdust and sand strewn floors. The aged pensioners left behind seemed like hunted animals, to guard their hiding places. Efforts to enlist the unfortunate tenants in conversation proved dismal failures. Only one young man, a bachelor butcher, was communicative. He was preparing to move. Rents, according to this young man, are from $2 to $3 a room.

Murphy's buildings are two-stories high, the front and rear being connected by partly covered porches. The sole hydrant of each floor and the rows of closets together with the unsightly and filthy garbage and ash chutes are the natural, fixed ornament of these connecting porches. Women, children, dogs, cats, wash tubs, gasoline stoves, and various household articles also serve to enliven the picture.

The amount of the rent and the meagre conveniences do not wrinkle the tenants brows with care. "When I has work," said one. "When I has work," said one. "When I has work," said one. "I don't work, nobody can make me pay it and Mis' McQuaid, she never pushes us. If she did—we'd jes' move out."

He declares that he will not take back one word of what was in the speech, and that if he had been correctly quoted he would not have been criticised. He said his words were not applicable to St. Louis alone or only to the West. He simply spoke of St. Louis as an illustration of the over-abundance of medical colleges, and the same state of affairs prevails in the East. He said he knew nothing of an effort to defeat him.

beliedom in an established society with ell defined boundary lines, as has already en said of greatness, that some are born it, others achieve it, and still others have it thrust upon them.

This arises from the fact that the chief gualifications for attaining the rank are three in number, namely, those of beauty, family and personal charm of manner and accomplishments. Thus, it is possible for nature to be so kind to a girl in the natal gift of beauty that she is born to belledom of of beauty that she is born to beliedom is surely as the sparks fly upward, so to beak; or for a young woman to fit herself or that high rank by determined effort in the way of culture and the cultivation of anner; or, lastly, for the accident of exceptually good family and distinguished concitions to render beliedom inevitable, ough unsought.

thonally good family and distinguished connections to render beliedom inevitable,

The society of St. Louis is so constituted that its younger feminine members possess the advantage both of heredity and environment most likely to bring them to the full bloom and fruition of beliedom, which is rightfully but the complete development of all that is best and most lovable in the womanly type of woman. In the elements that go to make up local society there is first, that of "blood," the inner circle of "old families" who have been honorably established here for generations; second, there is that mingling of certain foreign and native types most likely to establish and maintain the higher standard of female beauty in its productions, and third, there is the atmosphere of culture which insures to those who enjoy it the charm of manner and poole of bearing born of refinement and sood taste.

In the possession of these advantages the society girls of St. Louis have gone so far to the front, and proved so pretty and charming when they got there, that the syes of the marriageable world are upon them and thankful for the privilegs. Men of the effect East and of Europe are not content with the fleeting summer glimpses of the St. Louis girl which are vouchsafed them at mountain or seasied resort; they make pligrimages to St. Louis and study the type and the surroundings which produced it; having done which, their dooms are sealed and life is a blank to them unless they are so blessed as to find a wife among those wondrous young women who thus exemplify to the admiring world how dainty and adorable a girl can be when she really sets her mind upon it.

It is easy to understand that from a society thus fortunate with its femininty

It is easy to understand that from a society thus fortunate with its femininity it is difficult to select any number of beautiful women and say to the universe: "These are the fairest of the fair." The accomplishment would also be dangerous, as well as difficult. Paris, the son of Priam, attempted a similar feat in the classic ages and made the mistake of his life.

It is permissible, however, to present to the public those of the society world upon whom society itself has set the seal of belledom, and to state impartially that they are the chosen ones selected by society itself as its best representatives. Having done this, there is no harm in stating further that society seems to have displayed a most exquisite taste in its selection and that the young women now enjoying all the privileges and immunities of belledom in St. Louis are hereby proclaimed to be the peers of any similar body of young women in the civilized world.

It is with this plain statement and challenge that the Sunday Post-Dispatch now offers to its readers its list of some of the young ladies of St. Louis society who are recognized belles in that society.

Miss Hester Laughlin made her first ap-

Miss Hester Laughlin made her first ap-pearance in local society only this season, and she came with the crown of beliedom already resting upon her pretty brow. This was owing to the fact that last Oc-ober the great Veiled Prophet named Miss aughlin as Queen of the Veiled Prophet's Sall, and amid the pomp and pageantry of the grand coronation scene following this august choice, the young Queen's beauty, grace and maidenly dignity immediately led the social world to unqualifiedly indorse the Velled Prophet's estimate of her worthiness for royal honors. It was already understood that Miss Laughlin was to be introduced into society shortly afterwards, and when this was done the young lady at once became the toast of the season.

She is the daughter of Judge Henry D. Laughlin of this city; her mother, as Miss Neille Haynes, was a beauty of her own day, and Miss Hester has, therefore, a birthright claim to her present and presumably satisfactory eminence. Miss Laughlin is about of medium height, has a sender, girlish figure, a Grecian head, with brown hair, and frank, laughing eyes, and an especially winning and appreciative smile. Her first season in society has not been complete, inasmuch as the family went South during the severer portion of the winter, but she is said to own to a delightful religious of this sea-

Miss Mary Boyle is the daughter of Gen. John Boyle of this city. She is tall and queenly of figure, with blue eyes, blonde hair and dazglasiy fair complexion. In her tastes Miss Boyle is intelligent and keeps well up with the culture of the day.

Miss Katherine Mudd, known to the in-timates of her circle of friends as "Dot" Mudd, is the daughter of Dr. Henry T. Mudd. She is small and slender, inclining to the brunette type.

Miss Lulu Wear among her very good friends rejoices in the name of "Dude" for short. She is the daughter of the late Mr. Jas. H. Wear, is an extremely pretty young lady of the blonde order, is of medium height, and slender, graceful figure.

is siender and slightly under the medium height, with dark hair and an especially bright and attractive face. her home, and under whose guidance she was introduced into society. Miss Rexford is a blonde, has a superb figure, and is renowned for athletic prowess. She also excels in fancy dancing, but only for the private entertainment of her girl friends. Miss Julia Whittaker, whom her intimates call "Dedee," is the daughter of Mr. John Whittaker of the old firm of F. Whittaker & Sons. She is tall and slender of figure, with a markedly aristocratic bearing, dark eyes and hair. She is fond of athletics, and confesses to keen enjoyment as a spectator of a well-played game of base-ball.

Miss Sallie O'Fallon is the older daughter of Col. Ben O'Fallon, She is rather small and silght of figure, dark, with eloquent eyes, and is locally famous as a performer on the mandolin and banjo.

Miss Irene Wallace is a daughter of Mr. A. A. Wallace of the Samuel Cupples Wil
Miss Clara Hopkins is the daughter of Mr. Diamond Match Co. She is tall, dark and queenly-looking, and has an effective soprano voice.

Miss Frances Cabanne is the daughter of Mr. S. Carr Cabanne of one of the old Mr. S. Carr Cabanne of one of the Sierra Nevadas. He joined the American war to a

IN SORE NEED OF REFORMATION.

Corrupt Government of Chicago and the County of Cook.

A SECOND LEXOW NEEDED.

The Illinois Legislature in a Humor to Undertake an Investigation.

Special to The Pest-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 2.—Little else has been heard in the Legislature this week besides Chicago corrupuon. According to the statements of veracious members from Cook County, the city and county governments are in sore need of reform. It is alleged that the Chicago City Council is bribed by corporations, to which it stealth-lly gives privileges worth millions of dollars; that the tax assessors are bought up by the millionaires, who thus virtually escape taxation; that the police department is made up of thugs who grant immunities to criminals and shield the vicious classes for a consideration; and that corruption exists, to a greater or less degree, in all of the county and city departments. All these things have been set forth with more or less particularity in the resolutions of Senator Johnson and Representative Lowenthal and in the speeches made on the floor of the House in the discussion of the civil service hill. Senator Johnson's resolution provides for a legislative investigation of numerous charges. Unless the resolution is smothered in the committee there will be an investigation—a second Lexow inquisition. Powerful influences will be brought to bear to forestall anything of this sort, but the Legislature is in a humor to investigate something or somebody, and the Chicago City Council and police force will be interesting subjects. It is safe to guess that there will be an investigation.

The civil service bill passed the House Thursday. It now goes to the Senate, where its sailing may not be so smooth. Chicago reformers—particularly such of them as are Republicans—to give the people of Chicago an opportunity to vote upon the before the measure will become a law in any particular city. It is aimed especially to meet the wants of Chicago, though its provisions will apply to any city which may approve the law. It is the hope of the Chicago reformers—particularly such of them as are Republicans—to give the people of Chicago an opportunity to vote upon the question of adop

Representative Boyd has introduced a bill to prevent election bribing. It provides that the bribe-taker may sue and recover from the bribe-giver the sum of $300, and shall not be liable to criminal prosecution. It is believed that men who sell their votes, if they are protected, will "squeal" often enough to make trafficking in votes a very risky business.

Representative Morris has introduced a bill to prevent a stockholder in one corporation from owning or controlling stock in another corporation of the same kind. This is an anti-trust bill. Experience has shown that corporations evade laws which merely prohibit them from combining, by securing one set of stockholders for all the corporations engaged in a particular line of business. The Morris bill is aimed at this artful subterfuge.

ONLY ONE MORE WEEK,

JUSTILE ROCK, Ark., March 3.—The week just past has been a very busy and a very stormy one in both branches of the Legislature, and as it was next to the last week of the natural session of sixty days quite a good deal of rushing and "railroading" has been attempted, but with no appreciable effect.

fr. Newton of Pulaski intion extending the session actending the session areas by a vote of fit to a little year to the female, ye vote of 21 to a 1t will reverse to day.

BRIGHT YOUNG MEN

not so great as to draw into the canvass for its seat many men of signal ability, there are nevertheless identified with the House a few promising young men.

Of the mature minds it is not necessary to speak here—many of them being of but ordinary caliber—while the leaders among the older men are in no sense accidents, nor are they remarkable intellectually; but they have had a long start, and simply made fair use of their years for personal and political

It so happens that few of the younger men on the majority side have given evidence of ambition to be leaders, although one or two of them undoubtedly have abundant ability. The only young Republican in the House who is serving his first term with anything like distinction is Selden P. Spenof St. Louis. Mr. Spencer has a well-ciplined mind, correct and clear views of the fundamental principles of legislation and as far as can be observed from his bear and as far as can be observed from his bearing on the floor, is the parliamentary equal of any Representative with whom he serves. Moreover, Mr. Spencer is dignified and temperate in his acts and words, and exceedingly careful to keep within conventional limits in all parliamentary intercourse. To be sure he is a strict partisan, but not a political quibbler as are some of his colleagues; and his manifest sincerity goes a long way with those who are watching him to atone for his evident co-operation with the bosses of his party.

John E. Swanger of Sullivan County is yet a young man, but is not serving his first term. Mr. Swanger was for many years a school teacher, and though now engaged in the practice of law, has a good bit of the pedagogue left in him, and takes a marked interest in public school questions. He is an intense partisan, and when serving in the chair of the Speaker, as he has several times been called upon to do, his extreme partiality has marred an otherwise faultless administration of the duties of this responsible position. In fact, as an executive of the caucies dicta Mr. Swanger is more unyielding than any man who has occupied the place—not excepting Col. Bothwell, whose partisanship has several times invited the criticism of the most liberal of his opponents. But as to Swanger's ability to serve with credit in every relation belonging to legislation there can be no possible question.

Mr. R. L. Johnston of St. Louis County is the youngest member of the House, with one exception. He has been extremely modest in his participation in the debates, but has spoken and voted upon the liberal and the popular side of every important measure that his been up for consideration. His youthful appearance has of course subjected him to a great deal of notice that might have spoiled a youngster less solidly reared, but Mr. Johnston has gone in and out among the veterans with seeming unconsciousness that he has attained unusual eminence for a man of 24 years, and has seemed to be in no danger whatever of accumulating selfesteem sufficient to unfit him for further usofulness.

ocrat, Joseph C. Pratte, who had but two months to spare when elected to the Thirty-eighth General Assembly, while Mr. Johnston had a margin of about four months. Mr. Pratte takes nothing very seriously as yet, but he has accomplished one feat at the very beginning of the session that stamped him as a young man of grit and resources. At the instance of some of the State University people who were in consternation lest Dr. Alonzo Tubbs should be left at the head of the Appropriation Committee, young Pratte went to St. Louis, hunted up his old preceptor, Prof. Woodward of Washington University, and with him went to exhort the Hon. Chauncey I. Filley to effect a change in this disposition of the chairmanships. The visit was entirely successful, and young Pratte had the satisfaction of bearing to the telegraph office a dispatch from Fillley to Speaker Russell, making Tatum Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and Dr. Tubbs of the Elections Committee, and Dr. Tubbs of the Elections Committee, and with such effect that wonder has been excited that the young man does not buckle to and earn for himself the laurels that it would seem might come easily. It is manifest to all that he has talent of unusual value in several directions, but as yet he has not seen fit to exert it, or himself.

needay, after a contest of almost unprecedented sarrestness; and it is admitted that only his uniform courtesy to his assoclates during the week's discussion that preceded save him from defeat in the final test vote. But as Senator Dunn, one of Yeater's ablest opponents, remarked immediataly after the fight had ended;
"One can get ansity with Yeater-he's such a stiff fighter-but one cannot stay angry with him, for he always comes around so pleasantly afterward, no matter whether he wins or issea."

This quality, added to Yeater's ripe scholarship and undoubted gifts in oratory and mastery of the arts of debate, in part explain the remarkable success which he has already attained.

As a self-contained, determined, resourceful fighter-who almost always wins outarthur S. Lyman of Kansas City has no superior in the Senate. He, too, is a new Senator, but to watch his conduct on the floor, one might imagine that he had been trained to legislation from childhood. He has served in the House, and had two years in the Senate, but he makes a better showing than some of the oldest legislators in either body. Mr. Lyman is a corporation lawyer in large practice, an able defender of corporations on the floor, being at pressent Chairman of the Railroad Committee.
He is a Democrat, and one of the most vigilant in the protection of the narrow margin by which Democrats hold control.

John F. Morton of Ray County is another young Democrat who has had no difficulty in establishing himself as a strong positive quantity without any particular effort. Mr.
Morton has no ambition to shine as an orator, but when he speaks both good law and good sense bristle out of every sentence. He is a young man of more than ordinary fine appearance and address, refined in manner, kindly and approachable. He served in the House in the Thirty-seventh Assembly and was a candidate for the Speakership. He

The Newest Effects in Feathers, Lace and Gauze, Plain and Brilliantly Decorated-How to Use a Fan.

Special Correspondence of Sunday Post-Dispatch.

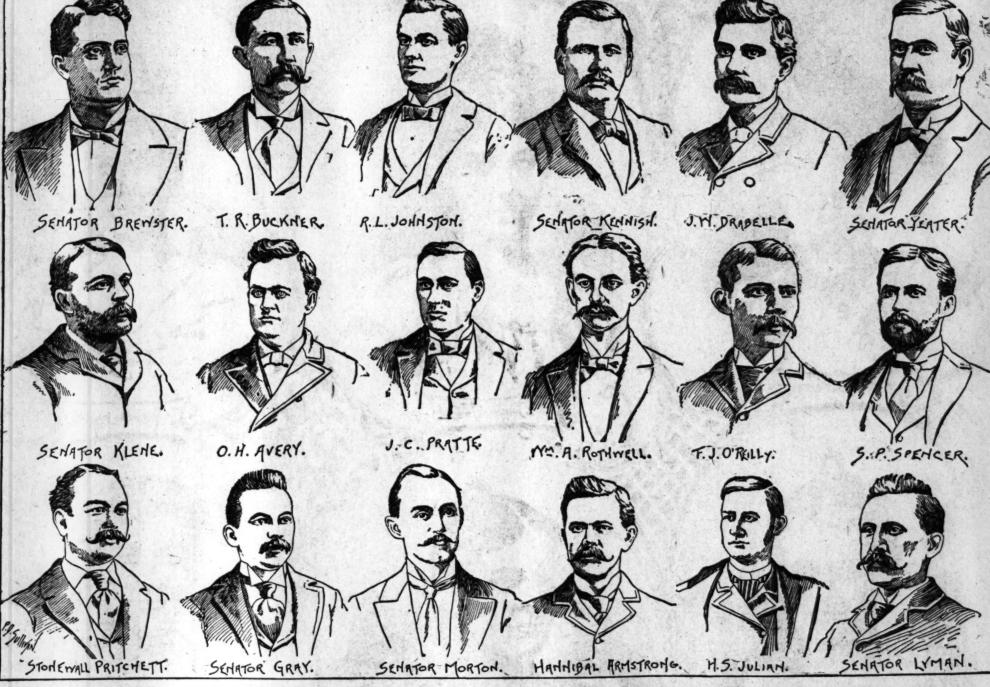

NEW YORK, March 6.—Fans, as one of the accessories of the fashionable woman's evening tollet, have acquired a marked im-senting Spanish or Mexican bull fights the color are extremely brilliant, and they are carried with great effect.

As a theater fan they are the most satisfactory which can be carried, being light but at the same time strong enough to create a vigorous breeza. With paper fans the sticks are always of wood. But with the intricate carving and enamel decoration they are much more effective than many things much more expensive.

One of the lessons taught in the Delsartean course is the way to use a fan. It is a lesson which many American women might take with profit. The graceful use of a fan is an art almost exclusively confined to Italian, French and Spanish women. The Chinese and Japanese women, viewed from our standpoint of grace, do not handle fans gracefully. The Germans as exponents of grace are in arrears in this point, as on many others.

The English woman is little better. And the American woman is entirely too energetic. There is all the characteristic nervous intensity of our people expressed in the way the average American woman wields a fan. A fan to be manipulated excepting must be manipulated leisurely, and that is a gift few American women possess.

BRIGHT YOUNG MISSOURI LEGISLATORS.

ener that wonder has been excited that the sound gears for himself the laurels. That it manifes to call that he has talent of unusual value in several directions, but as yet he has not seen fit to exert it, or himself.

Upon the plane of merit and performance John W. Drabelle deserves to be known as the Democratic leader of the House, but he is not serving his first term. Mr. Drabelle is an exceedingly careful and exact man, always careful to avoid the pitfalls set by the adversary. Moreover, his unvarying fairness in dejate and in the exercise of parliamentary prergative, has won for his side to the chair by Speaker Russell while the latter offered an amendment to a pending measure, and the House was called to the chair by Speaker Russell while the latter offered an amendment to a pending measure, and the House and perhaps fear, less their dreaded enemy should declare them adjourned sine die, or inflict some other awful pennity of the Speaker's reshness upon them. The fact is, Speaker's reshness men upon the House floor who give promise in the near future of extraordinary achievement. One of these is two. A. Rother the State University, and a young man to the New State of the state University, and a young man to the Assembly has made more friends by his social qualities. Mr. Rothwell is one of three of four young sea adoved with most agreed in the state of the season, and the four-certainly than any other first-term member.

Henry E. Julian of Kansas City is abrainy young Kuntuckian, who will be fairly young Kuntuckian, who will be the said of the colored to the charge of the state of the colored to the charge of the colored to the charge of the colored to the having to do with railroad revenues and taxation, without the least success or promise of it. Watch Henry Julian if the industrial classes of his district ever get the upperhand at the polls.

In all the roster of new members of the Thirty-eighth Assembly there is not a name that commands more general respect than that of Stonewall Prichett, Representative for Howard County. In the first place. Pritchett is an extraordinarily at the county and in the next, he talks just as ably and acts as manly as he looks. It was he who electrified the House, during the debate on Sunday base ball, with the candid decideration that he had been called a bad boy, that he had been a base ball crank, and that he made no pretense to plety; but he revered the religion that had been taught him at his mother's knee, and no act of his should bring disrespect upon either his early trainary or the religion of his parents.

Pritchett is a lawyer in good practice at Fayette, and his associates in the House district had lost the district had lost heart; and the same determination characterize all his work as a legislator.

Mr. Avery was born in Lincoln County forty-one years ago; educated in the schools of the county, and in the Law Department of the State University, and began practice in Troy in 1879, In 1880 he was elected Public Administrator of the county, and not he was elected Public Administrator of the county, and reversely was born in Lincoln County forty-one years ago; educated in the schools of the county, and in the Law Department of the State University, and began practice in Troy in 1879, In 1880 he was elected Public Administrator of the county, and he head began practice in Troy in 1879, In 1880, he was elected Public Administrator of the county, and in the Law Department of the State University, and began practice in Troy in 1879, In 1880, he was elected Public Administrator of the county, and in the Law Department of the State University, and began practice in Troy in 1879, In 1880, he was elected Public Administrator of House majority a score of times during this session.

Frank J. O'Reilly, Representative for the Sixth District of St. Louis, is another bright young member of the House minority, who is not absahed by the previous question or disturbed by the rising of an exasperated opponent to a question of privilege which he has called out. Mr. O'Reilly's Ceitic blood and Ceitic wit are often in evidence, and when he seeks to give a sharp answer to an impertinent question he never falls to make the House see the point. Mr. O'Reilly was born in St. Louis thirty-two years ago, educated at the Christian Brothers' College, whence he graduated in 1887; received the degree of Master of Arts at the Commencement of 1882, and was admitted to the bar in 1890. He was a candidate for the legislative nomination in 1838, but was defeated by a narrow majority. His majority at the election last November was 4.84. It goes almost without saying that Mr. O'Reilly has always taken an active interest in politics and has frequently been a delegate to State and City Conventions.

study, he is fearless in his utterances, once his mind is made up, and talks equally well whether the entire body or no single member thereof seems disposed to side with him. In this respect Mr. Kennish is just a little singular and to be picked out from among his fellows. He acts and talks like a young man who could be tied to in any exigency and be relied on never to desert his colors.

who could be tied to in any exigancy and be relied on never to desert his colors.

Arthur W. Brewster is the name of a young man of decidedly distinguished appearance who sits near Mr. Kennish, and who had the honor of beating the ablest all-around man who sat in the Senate of the Thirty-seventh Assembly. Mr. Brewster comes from St. Joseph to Jefferson City with an enviable reputation as a speaker in public, but-perhaps out of regard for the remarkable record of his predecessor—he has not put forth any serious exertion as yet to make an impression upon his associates. But he is a serious-minded young man, and gives assiduous attention to his committee duties, as well as to the large interests of the municipality in which the greater number of his constituents live. Mr. Brewster is a lawyer, just entering upon active practice, being yet under 30 years of age.

Benjamin J. Klene, representing the Thirty-fourth District in St. Louis, has made an excellent impression and record in the first session of his term. Modest and urbane, he has still shown great fairness and quickness of perception in a score of sharp brushes wherein both partisan and parliamentary advantages were at issue. Mr. Klene entered upon the fight for the adoption of the St. Louis Bar Association idea in the increase of the St. Louis Circuit Judgeships practically alone, and he pressed his campaign until he brought even so experienced and inflexible an opponent as Col. R. D. Lancaster, if not to his way of thinking, at least to the adoption of the fundamental features of the Bar Association idea. Mr. Klene has been in close touch with Senators Mott and Kennish, the Republican leaders of the Senate, and has always accomplished results with credit to himself and advantage to his party. Moreover, he has voted straight along upon that side of every question upon which the best argument could be made in the open, and he will leave the scenes of his first parliamentary battles with the respect, if not the good will, of every one of his legislative associates.

Where the fan carried is a genuine old relic, the claim of antiquity quite overbalances any incongruities or lack of harmony in color. There was never but one oil portrait of Daniel Boone, taken from life, and that was by Chester Harding, a distinguished artist of Boston, who came to Missouri in June, 1820, and painted it in the residence of his son-in-law, Flanders Callaway, where Boone was then living, near the village of Marthasville, in Warren County. It now hangs in the State Capitol at Frankfort, Ky. This picture is from a photograph of tous positions and is reproduced heavelite. Boone was then living, near the village of Marthasville, in Warren County. It now hangs in the State Capitol at Frankfort, Ky. This picture is from a photograph of tnat painting and is reproduced herewith. One of Boone's biographers, Timothy Filmt, who was a neighbor of Boone's in 1816 in St. Charles County, Mo., says: "He was 5 feet 10 inches in height, of a very erect, clean-limbed and athletic form, admirably fitted if structure, muscle, temperament and habit, for the endurance of the labors, changes and sufferings he underwent. He had what phrenologists would have considered a model head—with a forehead peculiarly high, noble and bold, thin and compressed lips, a mild, clear, blue eye, a large and prominent chin, and a general expression of countenance in which fearlessness and courage sat enthroned, and which told the beholder at a glance what he had been and was formed to be."

Rebeca Bryant, Daniel Booone's wife, was a very attractive, if not really a handsome woman, and the love which she inspired in the rugged breast of the old pioneer never abated during their long and eventful married life. Each was devoted to the other and the privations they endured and the perils they encountered seemed to bind them together with hooks of steel. His devotion for her became infatuation, and when he lost her by death in 1813 a dark shadow, darker than any forest wild he ever encountered, was thrown across his pathway.

While the family were living in the fort at Boones borough, Ky., she and two young friends, Betty and Francis Callaway, daughters of Col. Richard Callaway, were captured by the Indians while gathering wild flowers on the opposite bank of the Kentucky River, which they had crossed in a cance. They were pursued by Boone and Calaway and six other men and recaptured the following day.

Lavinia married Joseph Scholl and lived in Kentucky. She died in her 36th year.

Daniel Morgan Boone married Miss Lewis of Missouri, and died July 13. 1835, in his 72d year. He settled in Darst Bottom, St. Charles County, in 1797, but moved to Montgomery County in 1816. He held several important positions under the Government, and during the Indian war was appointed Colonel of the militia. He made most of the early Government surveys in the present counties of St. Charles, Warren, Montgomery and Lincoln. At the time of his death he was living in Jackson County. In personal appearance he resembled his father more than any of the other children. He was bolow the medium height and stouty built; had his voice was like a woman's.

Controversies have arisen among biographers in respect both to the time of his birth and death. Born at a very early period in the history of Pennsylvania and of obscure and uneducated parentage, it is perhaps no wonder that the time of his birth is uncertain; but it is one of the eccentricities of history that so recent an event as his death should be the subject of any contention.

George Boone, the grandfather of Daniel, came from England (where he knew William Penn) and arrived at Philadelphia Oct. 10, 1717, and the next year entered 400 acres of land in Berkley Township, Philadelphia County, now Exeter Township, Berks County, Pennsylvania. He was a member of the Society of Friends and was buried in the Friends' Cemetery in Exeter.

'Squire Boone, a son of George, and father of Daniel, married Sarah Morgan July 23, 1720. In 1730 he purchased 158 acres of land in Exeter Township, eight miles southeast of Reading, three miles from the mouth of the Monocacy River, and near the Philadelphia Pike; and here Daniel Boone was born Oct. 2, 1733, one year after the birth of Washington. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written to prove that Boone was born in Bucks, or Berks, County, he was not born in either, but in Philadelphia County, now Berks County.

In April, 1750, 'Squire Boone sold his estate in that county and moved with his family—Daniel then being 17 years old—to the banks of the Yadkin River, North Carolina.

He would sometimes draw the coffin out onto the floor and lie down in it, "just to see how it would fit." Finally a poor man and a stranger, died in the neighborhood, and Boone in the generosity of his heart gave up his coffin to the stranger, and he was buried in it. He afterwards had another manufactured of cherry plank, which was also placed under his bed and remained there until it received his own body for burial.

The house in which Daniel Boone died was the first stone dwelling-house erected in Missouri, and it is yet standing. An excellent picture of it is presented in this paper. The current literature of our time in respect to Daniel Boone represents him as often absent from home on long and perilous hunting excursions on both sides of the Missouri River. Doubtless he was occasionally thus absent; but that he was among the first permanent settlers, or a settler at all, of Cooper County is untrue. It is also frequently said and often printed, that on one of his long hunts he discovered and opened the Salt Springs at Boonesborough in Howard County and manufactured salt there. Conclusive testimony is lacking that old Daniel Boone ever was within the present limits of Howard County. It is, however, true that as early as 1897 his two sons,

GREATEST OF DIAMONDS.

It Has Been Sent to the Pope by the Transvaal Republic.

According to a cablegram received from London, the Pope has received from the President of the Transvaal Republic a diamond weighing 571 carats. The stone was found in the Jagersfontein mines and is declared to be the largest known.

The cablegram stated the monster diamond is of a bluish-white cast and practically perfect, the only blemish being a tiny spot in the center, invisible to the naked eye.

(Reproduced at its exact size.)

The largest cut diamond in the world is the Orloff in the sceptre of the Emperor of Russia, weighing 194% carats. It is cut in the rose form, with a flat surface below. According to one story, it formed the eye of an Indian idol and was stolen by a French deserter. In 1712 Count Orloff bought it for the Empress Catherine at a cost of $450.000. (Reproduced at its exact size.)

In 1789 it passed to Nadir Shah, the Persian invader of India, who gave it its name, of Kohinoor, or mountain of light. In 1849, when the conquest of the Punjab was finally completed, it was surrendered to the British, and in 1850 it was presented to Queen ish, and in 1850 it was presented to Queen Victoria.

When it was shown in the exhibition of 1857 in London it weighed 185 1-16 carats. Since then it has been recut, and now weighs 106 1-16 carats.

It has been conjectured that the Kohinoor originally formed part of the same stone as the Orioff diamond, both of them having once been in the possession of the Great Mogul. A stone of 132 carats captured by Abbas Mirza at the storming of Cocha in 1832 may be a third fragment. This was longused by a peasant as a flint for striking fire.

SOMETIMES FATAL.

In Their First Stages Piles Seem Insignificant.

Neglect Them and Results Are Often Fatal.

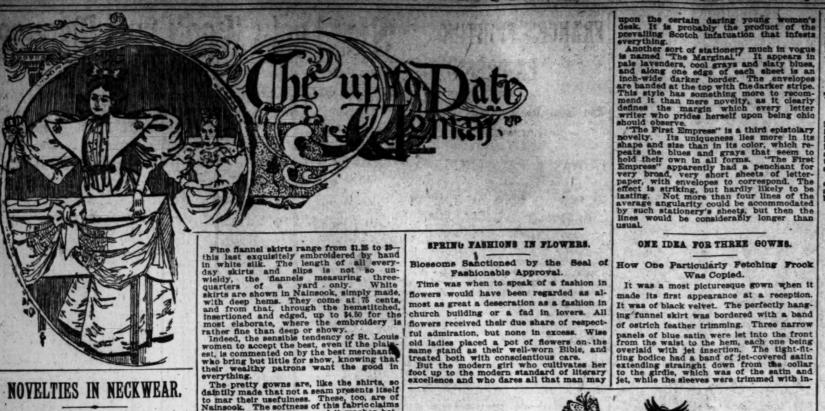

They Must be Treated in Time. Pyramid Pile Cure Cures Them So They Stay Cured.

At least one-fourth of all mankind are afflicted to a greater or less degree with piles.

Very often the disease is of irregular recurrence. Maybe the trouble comes only once or twice a year. Even so, it unfits a man for business while it lasts. Seems like a little thing, but it produces more bad feeling than even serious sickness would. In severe cases there is no comfort obtainable. Various salves and ointments afford temporal relief, but in a few minutes the pain returns. Each attack is a little bit worse than the last one. Itching is followed by bleeding and protrusion. Fistula follows—surgical treatment—death possibly. And all this can be avoided.

The discovery of Pyramid Pile Cure has made suffering unnecessary, even foolish. By its use relief is instantaneous. It soothes the inflamed parts, heals the broken membranes, reduces the swelling and brings comfort at once.

From D. F. Colling, Garnett, Kansas: I commenced using the Pyramid Pile Cure and my case was so bad I thought the remedy was going to fail in my case, but before I had used two-thirds of one package I began to feel much better and can honestly say I am entirely cured. It is the quickest and surest remedy I have ever tried or heard of. From Josiah Roberts, Port Oram, N. J.: Just one quarter of a package of the Pyramid Pile Cure has done more for me than anything I have yet used. Druggists sell and recommend Pyramid Pile Cure. There may be some who do not have it, in which case they will get it, or you can get it yourself, from the makers, the Pyramid Drug Co., Albion, Mich. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00.

The pretty fringed ruche, which is to take the place of the little minks everybody has worn, are simply made of silk, fringed, then closely pleated, with the inevitable violets here and there about them, and with short satin ties. Fedora lace collars and pointed collarettes are handsome and not expensive at $2.50, and the front of chiffon shows the new blouse effect that is so becoming to slight figures.

Baby's first caps are prettily hemstitched and with drawn work; the tiniest are 76 cents; more elaborate as high as $5. These are in cream china silk, and the long cloaks to match with double capes, warmly interlined, cost $11.50.

Slips for six months old babies, commence as low as $5 cents, plain, hem and yoke. Handsomely trimmed they are shown at $5. The first colored frocks for tots of two and three are pretty pale glughams

A lovely new blue ranging lighter than navy is mistral; light wools, silks, and bonnet garnitures are shown in this color. Azurine and calibre are the new names for the turquoise blues, azur and ciel for sky and baby blue. Corn flower blue has faded from popularity, simply because the color itself faded, but two or three shades of the bluet with silvery lights are shown in jacinthe and barbeau.

Latania is a new green, the exact reproduction in its yellowish tones of the graceful leaves of the wild palm of Louisians and Florida; for evening wear this is exquisite, and for millinery. Begonia is the pretty name for another yellowish green, and in the stem greens there are aloes, volga and capillaire.

Brown is always favored for spring; more especially can it be considered a favorite when it has golden lights; the familiar Mordore and Marron can again, and new names are given to shades varying ever so slightly: Dune, Trabucus, Gravier. Everything goes, in brown, gloves, ribbons, silks, but not in the dull shades.

The dreadful magents which only one woman in a generation can wear becomingly, and zhe would look prettier in something else—comes again, but somewhat improved, being lighter and not so purplish. Grenat, the dark red that suits so well the clear into of blonde women, will be worn, and the pretty coquelicot, scarlet, will make fetching crush collars, belts and accessories to the black costumes so much in evidence.

8t. Louis merchants have catered to the most refined tastes marvelously well this season. In the matter of collarettes, jabots, and all the dainty paraphernalis for beauty's adornment in the line of neckwear, our most exclusive houses show goods not to be surpassed in point of variety and taste.

From the delictous frill of pleated chiffon, which we are warned is but the shadow of the coming Elizabethan ruff, to the elaborate sonfection of satin, lace, and floating ribbons, everything shown is new and charming.

The large pointed collars that in velved have a dead so much to winter gowns, come now in the exquisite pompadour laces, with raised flowers and leaves. These are finished at the throat with chiffon frills, or have a band of insertion to fit over the collar of the gown. The price is $1.75, and in square yoke shape the same.

Then there is the broad satin yoke with deep lace fall; these come in section with lace for finish, and huge roseites at the sides, is $1.65, and there are shown deep collars, made of bands of velvet joined with lace insertion radiating from the throat; these come only in navy and deep garnet and are very handsome.

And now for a substitute. The favor of pansles was exhausted last spring, so they will not answer. Carnations have acquired a reputation for frivolity, because of their association with the wicked London story; hence they are out of the race. While the matter was thus being discussed on all sides, some ultra-fashionable girls appeared on the avenue, at the theater and at the dog show, all wearing huge bunches of showy La France roses and mignonette, and the question was settled without a demur. The fragrant, rare and delicate mignonetes found themselves the favorites of the hour.

Easter there will be a reaction in favor of the simple, unassuming white hyacinth and dainty lily of the valley. This will be followed by the annual fad for spring wild flowers, when arbutus, daisies and buttercups will be worn.

Still later in the full tide of summer, when society proper turns a cold shoulder on the heated city and its conventional surroundings and hies away to green fields and new conquests, the sway of the old-fashioned garden flower will begin, and the sweet summer girl, en masse, will set the seal of her approval on them by appearing with sweet peas at her belt, bunches of bachelor's buttons in her hands, clusters of rue and rosemary heaped in her carriage and, even in grand toilet, she will carry with her the scent of four-o'clocks and sweet brier.

The sweet pea blossoms are in varying shades of pinkish white and violet. They are fastened to a foundation of perwinkle satin ribbon, which is arranged at the side in dashing loops to give a stock effect.

Flower boas of buttercups mounted on black ribbon are effective worn with a black gown and a little toque of black velvet and buttercups to match. The boa of mignonette, with knots of baby blue velvet here and there and fastened in front with a big blue velvet bow, is another nevelty. High plaitings of ribbon caught with clusters of tiny flowers make a fetching boa to wear with a spring gown.

A ruche of lace combined with flowers is another new fancy. Full-bitwn roses and popples are the flowers most used for these boas. Many of the new boas have the stole effect which is generally produced by jeweled ribbons, or sometimes two fluffy scarfs of chiffon fall well over the gown.

HAZEL WANTED TO BE A BOY.

What Happened When the Wish Granter From Fairyland Appeared Out of the Fire. .

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

Hazel was a discontented little maiden who was always saying, "How I wish I were

She declared that boys had so much more fun than girls and that more liberty was given them. She wanted to run, shout, jump, walk fences and climb trees—between us Hazel was a bit of a tomboy—and not sit in the house all the time and play with dolls or take plano lessons.

She was always scolding and fretting about being a girl and made every one quite ill by her constant wish that she was a boy. One night, as she was sitting before the fire in the nursery, ready to creep into her crib, she began storming and scolding again on this subject.

"There's Jack," she said. "He can sit up and play until 9 o'clock because he is a boy. She declared that boys had so much more

SHE SAWA TINY LITTLE OLD WOMAN. SHE SAWA TINY LITTLE OLD WOMAN. I have to go to bed at 7 because I am a girl. I wish-how I wish I were a boy."

Something very queer happened just then. She was looking straight at the fire when she spoke, and wrinkling her pretty forehead up into a frightful scowl. She heard a funny laugh—a regular "snicker" Jack would have called it.

She gave a start and looked in the direction of the sound and saw a tiny little old woman, who looked for all the world like Cinderella's godmother, standing on the hearth, burying her funny, weagened face in her hands and giggling as if she were greatly amused.

her hands and giggling as if she were greatly amused.

"What are you?" demanded Hazel, putting a bold front on, although it must be confessed she was rather frightened.

"The Fairy Wish Granter, from the Land of Discontent," said the queer little mite, still grinning at Hazel.

"The Wish Granter," said Hazel, thoughtfully. "Well, what brings you here?"

"OI I have heard of you for a long time,

THE YELLOW-HAIRED BOY WAS GET-TING THE WORST OF IT.

SO I decided to drop in here this evening and have a talk with you about it;" and here the little witch fairly shook with laughter. "What are you laughing at?" asked Hazel, quite fiercely.

don't I would rather not look at them. I would not like to fight, good Mrs. Wish Granter."

The fairy ceased laughing now and said, guite seriously: "As I told you, I live in the Land of Discontent, where we hear all the sighs and groans and wishes of people who are not satisfied. We fairles are permitted to see those people as they would be if they had their wishes, and I can tell you, little Miss Hazel, as a rule they would be much worse off if they got their wishes. The Land of Discontent is a topsy-turvy country where everything grows the wrong way; but, strangely enough, it is the people who live there who upset everything. The land itself was all right until the family of the Grumblers moved in and took possesion. Since then everything has been going to the dogs. Nobody is satisfied with anything, except the fairies. We are always happy wherever we are. Then, too, we can always run over into the Land of Content, which is close by. And that, little Hazel, is the sweetest country ever seen. Such flowers! such rivers! such jewels! such sweets! such rivers! and of Content you must be satisfied with being a little girl and stop wishing for the impossible."

Then the fairy waved her wand and the two slowly sailed through the window and floated through the air until they looked down upon the lovellest country imaginable. It was flooded with sunshine. The towers and spires and domes of its cities shons like gold. Sweet strains of music were wafted up to them. Every one wore a smile, Every one looked happy. "The Land of

"I wouldn't be a boy for the world," an-nounced Hazel next morning at breakfast.
"I am satisfied to be a girl."
And the rest of the family looked at each other and wondered.

NEW YORK'S LITTLE TRILBYS.

Girls and Boys Who Pose as Models for Professional Artists.

THE ORIGINALS OF PICTURES.

Youngsters Who Support Widowed Mothers and Make Artists Famous by Their Beauty and Grace.

Special Correspondence of Sunday Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Since Trilby made her apeparance on the literary horizon the artist's model has suddenly become a most interesting personage. She figures in books, in magazinea, in poems, in amateur theatricals, on the professional stage, and even the clergy have learnedly discussed the artist model from the pulpit.

even the clergy have learnedly discussed the artist model from the pulpit.

But of all the models who help make fame and fortune for artists there are none more interesting than the child models. And the reasons, therefore, are many. In the first place they are necessary to the artist, for through a painting of child life fame is more quickly realised than in any other branch of figure painting.

One of the most successful of the child models is Violet Dalce, now 13 years of age. She would be on the stage were it not for the Gerry society, for she is a graceful dancer. She has a piquant face, large, lustrous blue eyes, a mass of beautiful hair, copper-timed, and has the natural grace of the perfect model.

She poses both draped and nude, but for eyes, a mass of beautiful hair, copper-tinted, and has the natural grace of the perfect model.

She poses both draped and nude, but for the nude to women artists only. She is a New York girl, the only daughter of a widowed mother, who is an invalid. Mrs. Dale is herself an artist and was very successful until ill-health caused her to abandon her profession, and necessity compelled her young daughter to take advantage of her natural talents. Violet has posed for Edwin Blashfield and others. Just now she is the model for Miss Florence Ballard Day's women's life class. Mrs. Dale always accompanies the youthful model and remains in the ktudio during her poses.

In the leisure time Violet receives instruction in stagecraft from Miss Bertha Welby, who speaks in the highest terms of her pupil's histrionic ability.

A large family of dolls, given her by artists, are a constant source of delight to the child and help to keep up that degree of childishness and lack of self-consciousness which are so essential to the youthful model.

THE REILLY CHILDREN.

The Reilly children are well known to artists who paint from child poses. Susie, aged 15 years; Carrie, 13 years, and Maggie, 10 years old, all have sat for pictures that have been hung in great salons, exhibitions and private collections. Even the Reilly baby, an infant in arms, has had its features depicted on canvas, and the mother of the family, as well, have joined the ranks of the models.

Susie, the eldest, has lower limbs which are considered well night perfect, and she is week during the winter and still be under home influence.

ROSO MARSTON.

Roso Marsion is one of the latest finds in the art world. She has been in studios only since last November, but has a host of artists clamoring for her. She is a dainty little elf of 12 years, and although she has been on the stage, is thoroughly childish and unconscious. The Gerry law is responsible for her new profession. Like many of the other child models, she is the daughter of a widow, and only took up the profession when the wolf knocked at the door and the pathway to her chosen occupation was closed. Vanderbit Allen, E. H. Blashfield and J. Wells Champney have painted her, the latter artist as "Cupid Asleep." This was a beautiful and successful picture Elwood Perry, Augustus St. Gaudens, George Wharton Edwards and many others have in the short time she has been posing secured sittings from her. Mr. Wilson of the Tiffany Stained Glass Co. drew his celebrated picture of the Infant St. John for soldiers of the grandmother of twenty-one soldiers of the civil war. The old lady

Susie, the eldest has lower limbs which are considered well nigh perfect, and goes a sustential to the models.

Susie, the really picturesque one of the Reilly's and while not the possessor of great beauty, has features which commend themselves to artists greatly. A profusion of hair of that reddish tint which can only be described as carrotty, deep-brown eyes as big as saucers, and a symmetrical figure, make her a destrable model.

The baby, who is probably the youngest model in New York, is yet too tiny to have her particular charms here chromeled, the is a model for the same reason that has sisters are a big famil on irregular work to furnish bread for all the hungry mounts. A model can earn between $15 and $18 a week during the winter and still be under home influence.

FAD IN CIGARS.

A New Yorker Has Weeds Gathered From All Parts of the World.

al Correspondence Sunday Post-Dispatch. NEW YORK, March 7.-Capt. Michael Flaherty has an extraordinary collection of cigars. Collecting cigars is his hobby, and in his exhibit are weeds of the kind smoked by the royalty and that are otherwise remarkable.

Before you could smoke them, you must pull the straw out. Only an Indian or a Spaniard can do that, and then he must be an expert.

"I have a cigar that is one of twenty-cight cigars, the over-product of 1,000 which were made especially for the Prince of Wales. Even he could not have them duplicated now. The filler and the wrapper were gathered in four months' growth in Havana. That meant the choicest product of a sesson. The cigars were made by a woman belonging to one of the wealthlest families in Cuba. She had acquired a degree of skill in making cigars by hand never equaled by any one on the island. She sent 1,000 cigars as a present to the Prince through our agent in London, in 1889. He still has two left.

"Over and above the 1,000, there were twenty-cight made by her. These were given to me. I presented Charley Delmonico with twenty-five, gave two to my brother Bill, and have one left. Those cigars would cost $1.85 each wholesale, and are the most costly cigars ever made."

They were wrapped in tissue paper, rolled in gold leaf, and had a band, with the Prince's crest bound around each cigar. Each box had a special lock and key upon it. "I have three cigars which were presented to me two weeks ago that were made from tobacco grown on Irish soil. The eigars were rolled by an Irish peasant woman, and if was only after an experiment of eight years that she and her husband succeeded in ralsing sufficient tobacco to make that number. Those are the only three cigars of Irish growth and manufacture in existence. I have cigars that were made from tobacco grown in each of the tobacco-raising States in the United States. I have one cigar older than I am, and I am 35 years of age.

"I have a Henry Clay known as the Loberano, that could not be retailed for less than $1.50 each. Such cigars are appreciated by only a few of the men who can afford to buy them. One of the biggest orders for Prince, who redered $2,500 of them for Count de Castellane as a wedding gift. It took us two months to fill the order."

FRANCE'S FIGHTING EX-PRESIDENT

The Real Reason Why Casimir-Perier Resigned.

IT WAS A PATRIOTIC DUTY.

He Wanted to Arouse His Country to the Necessity of Choosing a President by Election by the People.

BEAULIEU, Alpes Maritimes, Feb. 25.—
In the interval between Mr. Cleveland's defeat in 188 and his election four years later I happened to sit near to him at a dinner. Someone declared that the ex-President was sure of a renomination, because, chiefly, there was no one else in the Democratic party who could be elected. Mr. Cleveland very gravely interrupted the speaker. "Do you know." he said, "that the thought which most impressed me as I was driving up to the Capitol to be inaugurated on March 4, 1884, was that my predecessor, elected only four years before, had never even heard my name. The possibilities of a republic are infinite. No man is indispensable to; for to either of its parties. To-morrow may produce a new leader."

It was very true that President Garfield had probably never heard the name of Grover Cleveland. When he succumbed to Guiteau's bullet on Sept. 20, 1831, Mr. Cleveland was: a comparatively unknown lawyer of Buffalo. He was not elected to the Mayorality until the following November. In the summer of 1883, when I was in a company at Albany discussing the possible candidates for the Democratic nomination for Goveraor, his name was suggested, and neither Daniel Lamont, his present most intimate friend, nor St. Clair McKelway, the editor of the Argus, remembered to have heard of him before.

All this has been recalled to me and emphasized during the past fow days, as M. Casimir-Ferior. Intely President of the renew frame of the company of the lamont of the man of the company of the lamont of the properties of the company of the lamont of the properties of the man of the company of the old World during these two days, the newspapers fearing to give it expression because of the grave danger of international complications. But the almost unknown Felix Faure appeared, because Fresident, is apparently the ideal man for the suntile and provincial reporters. He has positively refused to see any one of them. They have so of international complications. But the almost unknown Felix Faure appeared, bec news!"

But M. Bois-Glavy, the reporter who signs this attempt at an interview, could not see M. Casimir-Perier after all. So he takes his revenge by noting that the ex-President lives in "the Hotel of the English," with the British ensign floating over it, and that the hotel is kept by a German! So he himself drops into English with fine scorn.
"Alas! poor Casimir-Perier," he writes.
"Meme a Beaulieu ii n'est pas populaire."

"Alas! poor Casimir-Perier," he writes.

"Alas! poor Casimir-Perier," he writes.

"Meme a Beaulieu il n'est pas populaire."

I had a card of introduction to M. Casimir-Perier from Mr. Eustis, cur Ambassador to France, which was expressed in such terms that the moment I sent it to the expressed the replied naming an hour for our meeting. I had previously seen him constantly about the hotel, taking dejeuner with his beautiful wife and his little daughter of 1 for so, who gives promise of being even more beautiful and graceful than her mother, strolling along that most fascinating walk in all the world, which borders the sea on the way to the Villa Vial and the Cap St. Jean; dining at La Reserve or the Grand Hotel at Monte Carlo-always chatting animatedly with wife or daughter, the wife clinging to his arm as they walked and his child's hand in his.

I have already cabled the World the absolute denial of his Chef de Cabinet of his bitterest political enemy. M. Millerand, and of others who are in a postiton to know the facts of that report which has been published in two newspapers in New York that steps have been taken for a divorce between M. and Mme. Casimir-Feriar. No French paper—not even any of the foul-mouthed organs of Belleville and Montmartre—has ventured to allude to the rumor. If there was ever any truth in the report of domestic difficulties between them they are certainly consummate actors in concealing the fact. I have never seen a more apparently affectionate family. It was one of these New York papers, it will be remembered, which published the false story of discord in President Cleveland's family.

M. Casimir-Perier speaks perfect, idiomatic English word to express his meaning. He is rather under the average height, with a compact figure and singularly brilliant eyes. When he is interested in the matter under discussion his face lights up to the degree that he is very handsome. Otherwise he looks commonplace—not at all the distinguished looking personage his photographs would indicate. He receive which led to his resignation. But he interrupted himself in the middle of all this to say:

"I must ask you not to report for your newspaper what I say—for the present at least. The time has not yet quite arrived when I am willing to have these things published. You are the only newspaper man I have received since my resignation. I have apparently given great oftense by refusing to see any member of our own press. But I promise you that I will shortly give you an interview for publication in your paper on these points as well as upon the question of the proposed income tax in France—a subject in which, you tell me, your journal and the American people take your journal and the American people take make it highly improper for the proposed income tax in the press. Scientists and the Soothsayers Unsatisfactory in Their Attempted Explanations of Dreams.

will soon have news from a far country, and "to dream of clear water is a sign of grief?"

Perhaps the modern system of interpretation may be summed up in the terse aphorism that "dreams go by contraries to be sufficient of the living."

It is more conducive to comfort of mind on the whole, to return to the ancient sages. Abracadabra may again be quoted as delaring that the "most fortunate of clear water to the ancient sages. Abracadabra may again be quoted as delaring that the "most fortunate of clear much older authority than Abracadabra; the wise and introlled, the same that you stand naked in the streets is a sure sign of trouble, distress and perpexity." Not to be wondered at sureven in a dream!

Let us go back still further and consult a much older authority than Abracadabra; the wise and learner significations, embracing almost every known tree and plant; vegetable, flowers and fruits. To dream of a leafless tree is a sign of great sorrow; of a tree without branches, despair and suicide; the yew and the elder mean sickness to the young and death to the old. "For a maiden to dream of significations are their significations the hoary old sage; for a married woman it means bereavement. Indeed Tyroscophornus divides his significations are their significations. To dream of fortune. The lime tree means a voyage across the ocean; the elder tree heam of the age portends long life and prosperity-fitting is this, decidedly,—and the ash tree foretells a long journey.

Only limited by the number of known shrubs are their significations. To dream of dock leaves means a present, or possibly only a visit from your country relatives, or the bark portends an increase of a proper means the approach of calamity which will require all your courage to face. Of the sunflower, the loved of the aesthetic, a deep wound to your pride.

If a fair maiden dreams of daffodils, should be a portable mudeyuard, calculated to meet with the unanimous approval of wheelmen. It consists of a thin, flat slide or other material to give it a ne

If a fair maiden dreams of daffodils, she must alas! mistrust her hover; he will bear watching. A sad fate with which to burden the innocent posy. Heart's ease means heartache; lilies, joy, to dream of roses brings happy love, not unmixed with sorrow. The fragrant, modest violet, whose perfumed petals give sweet odor without stint, if seen and carried in dreams, brings sorrow and evil to the unwedded, but the opposite, joy and good, to the married. Water lilies appropriately portend dangers from the sea.

Simple cerate, two drams.
Apply the salve at night, cover it with a piece of cloth or adhesive plaster and leave it on all night. Soak the foot in hot water the next morning and the corn will probably come out.

At the Herreshoff Wolds, in Bristol, says the Providence (R. I.) Journal, the lead keel that was run nearly a week ago in the south shop is in plain sight, as the wooden mold has been removed and a good view can be had of it. It is of a peculiar shape, water every two or three hours. The troublesome litching which usually accompanies an attack may be relieved by applying a lotion composed of one part of ammonia, two parts of spirit of camphor and two parts of alcohol.

Will you kindly tell me how te make a snuff for cold in the head?
You can make a very good snuff by mixing equal parts of powdered camphor, borax and salt.

Will you kindly inform me through your medical column how to mix cream of tartar and rochelle saits and how the mixture should be taken?—Henry C. H.

1. Take one part of cream of tartar to three parts of rochelle saits. 2. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water every morning.

You would greatly oblige me by printing a remedy for excessive perspiration of the feet.

The following is a very good remedy: Salicylic acid, 30 grains.
Oxide of sinc, 1 ounce.
Lycopodium, 1 ounce.
Dust the feet with it several times a day.
Kindly advise me through your medical talks of a remedy for violent palpitation of the heart caused by excitement and nervousness.—C. D. S.
You will probably find a very good remedy in a mixture composed of equal parts of Hofman's anodyne and compound spirits of lavender. Take a teaspoonful in water, and repeat the dose in an hour or two if necessary.

Kindly let me know what to take for rheumatic pains in my right shouder.—C. H. K.
Try phenabetine and saloi. Take five grains of each drug every two or three hours.

Please inform me what I can take for fatulency. It troubles me after meals.—Caroline.

would be the hardlest, and as a matter of fact, some of them do show almost miraculous tenacity of life, as all old trappers can testify. A Canadian trapper found not long ago that one of his traps had disappeared. A month afterwards the people of Green Lake, ninety miles distant from the place where the trap had been set, killed a wolf with that very trap attached to his leg. The animal was reduced almost to a skeleton. That he should have been able to drag the trap about for a month through a hundred miles of forest, shows how hard it is to kill a wolf, and doubtless his relatives, the fox and the jackal, as well as other wild animals not so nearly connected, could furnish material for equally wonderful tales.

Going down lower in the brute creation other wild animals not so nearly connected, could furnish material for equally wonderful tales.

Going down lower in the brute creation the power of clinging to life seems to increase. Everyone knows how hard it is to kill a snake, and the old supersition about the pieces living till sunset seems to have been quite justified. Other reptiles show even more wonderful powers. It is hard sometimes to kill a common tortoise. An English writer, Shaw, tells of one that lived six months after its brain was taken out, moving its limbs and walking as before. Another lived twenty-three days after its head was cut off and the head itself opened and closed its jaws a quarter of an hour after it was separated from the body.

Next lower in the scale of creation come the fishes, and no fisherman need be told that they will flop about in the liveliest way hours after they have been pulled out of their natural habitat. But the champion of all fish in this respect is the shark. It is so hard to kill sharks that they often live when life would seem impossible. A shark was completely outclassed.

The stomach is the most important and the most abused organ in the body.

If a person catches a little cold on the lungs he immediately seeks treatment for it. If his kidneys show symptoms of weakness he becomes alarmed at once. But if his overworked stomach rebels he pays no attention to it until sleepless and general weakness and lack of energy show plainly that something is wrong. He are to be in this condition never think of ascribing the trouble to the stomach, but they dose themselves with loudly advertised "nerve tonics," "spring medicines," "pro digested food," etc., and then wonder why they don't get well.

All of these things are so-called secret remedles, patented medicines, which are advertised to produce wonderful results, but they are all very careful not to tell you exactly what the wonderful preparation really contains. As a matter of fact "nerve tonics" are simply stimulants; they make you must repeat the dose.

"And just as I was going to break out like a young fool, the Cockney caught me by the arm of the ship's fok'sle, for a man's legs protruded from above, and kicking for a foothold, a seaman came down. And then others turned out, too.

**Then let me sign now.' I said. "Then the captain and strip to said I; 'my hame's sleeky, and as for strength, there was no one in the ship but the Captain and surjes were come near me. So, the feel alarm out, 'said the man, satirically. "Then the me's name sleek and i'm a doctor. I want to see the Captain. "Then the captain and surjes were come near me. So, the feel alarm out, 'said the man, satirically. "And just as I was going to break out like of the graph." "I don't which is enough, and as for strength, there was no one in the ship but the Captain and surjes. "Sorry I can't oblige you by rousing the captain." "I don't which is enough, and as for strength, there was no one in the ship but the captain. "Then the me's shoulder and shook me violently. I sat up.

"Where am I?"I asked.
"'Down the channel, with a stocking round your neck,' said the smoker. 'Or, rather, off Cape Hatteras. Hoist your carcass out o' that. You belongs to this bloomin' watch, and it's to be 'oped you're as good as you're big,' said this obvious Cockney.

"Stur, said he. I were orders when he spoke in that voice, so I turned out, slipped into my dungaree pants and jumper and went att barefoot "The captain was lying at the foot of the ladder, and he evidently had had a heavy
